DISTRICT COUNCIL URGES PIER MEN TO RESUME WORK

Ballot Plan Abandoned, Tonight's Meeting Will Decide the Issue.

LEADERS WANT MEN BACK

FERRYMEN VOTE TODAY

Railroad Administration Insists They Go Back to Work Before Demands Are Heard.

The strike of 40,000 longshoremen, which has paralyzed transatlantic and coastwise shipping and tied up the harbor for nearly a week, causing great loss in perishable foodstuffs, will be brought to an end today, according to the opinion voiced last night by both T. V. O'Connor, President of the International Longshoremen's Association, and John F. Riley, Chairman of the Strike Committee. This prediction was made after a four-hour meeting of the delegates to the New York District Council at 184 Eleventh Street, at which the delegates, representing the fifty-four locals, voted to urge the men to go back to work tomorrow morning and wait until Dec. 1 to press their demands for increased wages.

There will be a mass meeting of the longshoremen tonight at a place to be determined later, at which the question of returning to work tomorrow morning will be put up for their ratification or rejection. The plan of taking a referendum vote by locals has been abandoned, and the action of tonight's mass meeting will settle the question, one way or the other.

Coupled with this development in a situation that has held the port in the grip of strikers for nearly a week, was the possibility of the resumption some time today of the railroad ferry, tug, and lighter service on the Hudson River, which has been suspended since Friday midnight on account of a strike of firemen, oilers, and deck hands. A committee representing the Railroad Administration met with a committee of union leaders for four hours yesterday at the office of Federal Manager A. J. Stone, 30 Church Street, and the return of the men was required as a condition precedent to consideration of their demands for increased pay and a six-day week. Joseph Stanton, business agent of the Railroad Port and Terminal Workers, said he would put the matter before his men at 8 o'clock this morning at a meeting in White Eagle Hall, Jersey City.

Mr. Stanton and other officials of the Railroad Port and Terminal Workers at first expressed hope that the men would vote to end the strike, but they shifted their position last night after reading and digesting the letter from A. J. Stone, Chairman of the Railroad District Conference Committee, asking that the men go back to work before negotiations can be continued. Mr. Stanton said last night that in view of the charge made by Mr. Stone in his communication that there had been a breach of contract by the union, there was little likelihood of the men voting to return to work at the Jersey City meeting this morning. He asserted that the records would show that on March 7 last, when the Railroad Committee entered into an agreement with the Marine Workers' Affiliation, that the Port and Terminal Workers expressed dissatisfaction with the provision of that agreement. He said that the Erie Railroad violated its own promise by not paying the $103 monthly scale to the float bridgemen until the middle of July instead of from March 1, as they offered.

Weather Eased Conditions.

The disagreeable weather, coupled with the fact that it was Sunday, favored the crippled traffic facilities between Manhattan and Jersey points yesterday, and the ferry boats of the Lackawanna Railroad, which, with the Fort Lee ferry boats, are not affected by the strike, and the Hudson tubes were more than adequate to handle the passengers and vehicular traffic.

Passenger traffic being slack yesterday it was possible to get more milk in the city on time than was the case on Saturday, and officials of the Borden and the Sheffield Farms Companies said that virtually a normal supply was received. Milk trains were also run into the city by way of the Hudson River bridge at Poughkeepsie, the Hell Gate bridge, and the Pennsylvania tube.

The conference between the Railroad Administration Committee and the union officials was followed by an executive session of the railroad officials at which

Bandit Raisuli Offers To Surrender to Spain

MADRID, Oct. 12.—A report from Tangier says that Raisuli, the bandit, has offered to surrender to the Spanish Government. Spanish troops, according to Morocco reports, have occupied Peni Metuar, Ruima, and Escarnia.

Raisuli's forces were recently defeated by Spanish troops and his stronghold in Morocco captured. Latest reports had the bandit in flight in the direction of the Sinai Mountains.

TEAMSTERS' STRIKE MAY TIE UP STATIONS

Walkout at 12 Last Night Menaces Railway Terminals in New York City.

SMITH APPEALS FOR DELAY

Acts After Hines Promises to Take the Matter Up with Wage Board This Morning.

Teamsters employed by the American Railway Express in New York and its vicinity struck last midnight, notwithstanding the appeal of Governor Smith for a postponement for a few days until further advices could be received from Director General Walker D. Hines of the Railroad Administration relative to their demand for increased wages.

Martin Lacey, Secretary of Local 645 of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, said at 9 o'clock last night that the men were determined to go out, and that the strike would go into effect at 12. However, business agents were sent around to the men to urge them to remain in their places for twenty-four hours to await developments from Washington.

In spite of the efforts of the business agents, who tried to get the men to remain at work for twenty-four hours, they began going out at midnight, and at 1 o'clock this morning it was said at the headquarters of the teamsters' union that it was impossible to stop the walkout. The first to go out, according to reports received by Mr. Lacey, were the men employed at the Grand Central Terminal.

Governor Smith was notified of the threatened strike late last night, when he was at a ball at Sulzer's Harlem River Casino.

"I have said everything there is to say in the matter," the Governor stated. "I regret that the men have taken this action, but there is nothing that I can do. I will leave it to the Reconstruction Commissioner, who will begin working on the situation tomorrow morning."

According to Mr. Lacey, the strike will involve 11,000 employes of the American Railway Express. He said that platform men, porters, clerks, and other help also would go out, and that practically every railway terminal in Manhattan, Brooklyn, Bronx, and Long Island City would be tied up. Milk, fish, fruit, and other perishable foodstuffs would be left at the terminals without means of being moved. Mr. Lacey said that the teamsters' union had about 8,000 members in New York and vicinity.

Hines's Reply to Governor.

Governor Smith took a hand in the controversy Saturday, after the matter had been presented to his Labor Board. He sent a telegram to Director General Hines urging immediate action on the demands of the teamsters to avert a strike.

Mr. Hines replied Saturday night, but the message was not received by Governor Smith until yesterday. It read:

"Your telegram of today received this afternoon. Our Wage Board gave a hearing to teamsters employed by the United States Railway Express in New York City on Sept. 10 and 11. I am not able to get into communication with members of the board this afternoon, but will take the matter up with them the first thing Monday morning with a view of expediting action as rapidly as practicable. I greatly appreciate your communicating with me on the subject."

The contents of the telegram were transmitted to Mr. Lacey yesterday afternoon, the Governor making the following comment:

"While appreciating your patience in this matter, the assurance from the Director General of expeditious action leads me to appeal to you for the exercise of further patience by refraining from any action which would add to the existing serious disturbance of conditions in the Port of New York.

"During the war no group was more loyal than the men of labor. In the industrial crisis of the present hour I appeal to that same patriotism. I am confident you will not be found wanting.

"My labor board will continue its cooperation, and I shall use every influ-

Sharp Allied Note to Berlin Threatens Coercion Until Germans Leave Baltic Provinces.

Letts Landed from Warships To Attack Foe on Their Flank

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 12.—A dispatch from Berlin says that 50,000 Letts have been landed at Libau from British warships and will attack the flank of Colonel Avaloff-Bermondt's troops.

STETTIN, Germany, Oct. 11.—Demands that German ships on the Baltic be recalled to their home ports and that all others be forbidden to leave were received by the German Government in a telegram from London this morning, according to the Abend Post of this city. The telegram is quoted as follows:

"Owing to the attack on Riga, free passage permits are provisionally withdrawn for all German ships in the Baltic. All ships in the Baltic must be recalled and no other ships must be permitted to put out to sea as long as this prohibition remains in force. Ships encountered in the Baltic are subject to seizure by the Allies."

The newspaper says this telegram has been transmitted to the "authorities concerned" at German Baltic ports. In another article, the Abend Post asserts the Entente powers have re-established a "small blockade" of Germany.

News of a blockade of the Baltic Sea has created a sensation in Danzig, where large cargoes of coal and herring were expected in the next few days.

BERLIN, Oct. 11.—More apprehension than ever exists here at present over the outcome of the Baltic adventure. Even if Germany is not wholly and officially responsible she dreads being made responsible for the actions of troops who seem to be acting in defiance of Government orders.

The evil von der Goltz is not the principal figure in the cast this time. He seems to have repented of his original stubbornness, although his actions are still dubious. We were told some time ago that he had been recalled, and that his troops were evacuating. He is now again on the scene of his former plotting, but this time, we are told officially, his purpose is to urge upon the troops the necessity of retreating, and so saving the country from a renewal of the blockade.

The German Government's position is difficult to describe. Technically it is faultless. It has addressed proper orders to the troops and forbidden supplies to be sent them, but plotting is still carried on with Berlin for its centre. South German troops still go adventuring into the Baltic regions, and the Government is rather colorless in its declarations.

Nobody speaks or writes with approval of what is going on, but probably the official attitude is win and we support you; lose and we disown you.

RIGA, Oct. 11.—After three days of fighting the Germans have entered the town, but they had to fight against a determined rearguard of 2,000 Letts under Colonel Berkzis, who on the third day were reinforced by 400 Esthonians with armored trains.

As all military probabilities and calculations had anticipated, the Letts, having their left flank driven in, were beaten, but while a handful of cool

Albanians Accuse Italy Of Planning to Crush Them

LAUSANNE, Switzerland, Oct. 12.—The National Albanian Committee here has issued another appeal to the Peace Conference, in which it is declared that the pretensions of Italy, as recently expressed by Signor Tittoni, the Foreign Minister, as confined to the occupation of Avlona and the exercise of a mandate for Albania, are only a cloak for imperial designs, and that the negotiations between Italy, Greece, and Serbia have in view an understanding equivalent to the annihilation of Albania as a nation.

The document declares that the Albanians will never consent to the occupation of Avlona, nor to a mandate such as Italy seeks.

FIUME FAVORS A BUFFER STATE

Rome Announces Ambassador Cellere Is to be Recalled from Washington.

ROME, Oct. 11.—Foreign Minister Tittoni will leave Rome on Monday for the royal shooting lodge at San Rossore, where he will confer with King Victor Emmanuel before his departure on Tuesday to resume his work at the Peace Conference. In all quarters hope is expressed that representatives of the Entente nations on the Supreme Council now realizes the "absolute necessity" of a speedy settlement of the Adriatic question, not only in the interest of Italy, but also because of its bearing on the peace of Europe.

Signor Tittoni is ready, it is reported, to go to the "extreme limit" in making concessions to reach this result. His new project respects President Wilson's principles opposing the establishment of an independent state comprising the districts of Istria and Adelsberg under the League of Nations, and the assigning of the Volosca district to Italy and Fiume, the latter would be a buffer State between Italy and Jugo-Slavia.

It is asserted this scheme has already been approved by the National Council of Fiume, which, if the plan should be accepted, would itself ask Captain d'Annunzio to retire from the city.

Italy has decided to send to Washington a new Ambassador to take the place of Count V. Macchi di Cellere, but the Government has not chosen the appointee as yet.

It is agreed that the man to be named must be an accomplished diplomat, thoroughly acquainted with the language and habits of America, and commanding great respect by his career. He must, in addition, it is said, has complete knowledge of financial, economic and commercial conditions. It is admitted these qualities will be hard to find in a single individual.

PARIS, Oct. 11.—The allegations in the Italian and French press and propaganda that the Peace Conference finds itself in the present tangle because the American delegation has no final powers and must refer all matters to Washington for decision, and that consequently the peace of Europe is imperilled by the illness of President Wilson, brought the reply today that Americans referred fewer matters to their Government than the French, British, or Italians.

It is stated that practically no decision had been put up to President Wilson recently except the Fiume controversy. In this the Italian delegation had to confer with Rome at every step. In the discussion of the new Fiume proposals just submitted the Italian delegation has had to ask its Government for instructions upon details. Except when Premier Clemenceau is sitting, the French do not take decisions without asking their Government about it; and it is a matter of common knowledge, it is stated, that the British delegate works at the end of the long-distance telephone.

The American delegation has powers as full as any other delegation now at Paris. And even in the Fiume matter it considers it has sufficient instructions to take final action now. It is very unwilling to shoulder any more than its share of responsibility for delays in the Peace Conference programs.

RUMOR BUSY ABOUT WILSON

Speculation on Nature of Illness Is Increased by Moses Letter.

GRAYSON'S COMMENT SCANT

Report of a Cerebral Lesion Thought by Senator Hitchcock a "Gross Exaggeration."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.—Dr. Grayson declined today to comment on the exact nature of President Wilson's condition, speculation about which has been greatly increased by the publication of the letter of Senator Moses of New Hampshire to one of his constituents. Tonight Dr. Grayson issued the usual bulletin without granting the usual interview to newspapermen, and at his home, later, it was stated that the doctor had returned to the White House and was to spend the night there.

The fact that Dr. Grayson had decided to spend the night at the White House aroused interest. Late tonight inquirers there found no evidences of activity. When the President first returned, Dr. Grayson spent every night there. Since then he has been at the White House off and on at nights. It was impossible to learn whether his staying there tonight had any special significance.

Pressed for a statement this morning as to the character of the President's illness and for comment on Senator Moses's letter, Dr. Grayson asked whether "Senator Moses is a physician." When told that he was not, Dr. Grayson remarked that "Senator Moses must have information that I do not possess."

Dr. Grayson was asked whether the President had suffered a cerebral lesion or hemorrhage, and said he would not at this moment comment on any of the reports circulated as to the President's condition, explaining that he and the other attending physicians had agreed on a policy of not answering questions based on current reports.

In response to another question, based on the letter of Senator Moses, Dr. Grayson remarked that it would not do to attach "too much credibility to long-distance diagnosis."

Senator Moses, when reached late tonight, admitted that he wrote the letter as printed in THE NEW YORK TIMES this morning.

"Certainly I admit it," said Senator Moses. "I have no reason for denying it. I have had more than half a dozen letters from inquiring constituents of mine in New Hampshire asking for information as to the real condition of the President. I have answered these letters, in the light of my best information, in the same way.

"Other Senators have had similar inquiries from constituents. I do not recall just now to whom it was I wrote this particular letter, but in all the letters I wrote, in reply to constituents, I said the same thing.

"I do not pretend to have any straight line on the White House. In these letters I have merely given my constituents a statement of the facts as I understand them in the light of the best evidence that I have been able to obtain here."

The effect of the publication of the Moses letter, containing the statement that the President had suffered a cerebral lesion, and that "while he may get well, he will not be any material force or factor in anything," has been a more insistent feeling throughout Congressional circles in Washington that the situation has reached a point where some definite official statement should be issued to the country disclosing the exact nature of the President's illness.

More than thirty bulletins have now been issued dealing with the progress of the President's condition from day to day. In none of them is there any statement as to the nature of the President's illness more definite than that contained in one of the earlier bulletins which stated that the President was ill from "nervous exhaustion." Persistent efforts have been made to ascertain from the White House something more definite about the President's case. Dr. Grayson has steadily refused to say what is the matter with the President, and he and the other attending physicians have decided to stand by the announcements made in the brief official bulletins which are issued twice daily at the White House. It was pointed out tonight that in none of these bulletins had there been any technical statement of the case, no announcement as to the pulse, temperature and blood pressure of the patient, and that for the most part the bulletins had not contained more than two brief sentences.

In the absence of any official state-

COL. HOUSE BACK, ILL, FROM PARIS

IS HELPED FROM SHIP

Laughs at Report That He Will Advise President to Relinquish Cares of Office.

After nearly a year's absence from this country, Colonel Edward M. House, a member of the Paris Peace Conference and adviser of President Wilson, returned yesterday from France on the army transport Northern Pacific with his wife. He looked pale, weak, and tired after his illness in Paris and the strain of his long and continuous labors over the Peace Treaty and the League of Nations.

When the transport was made fast at Pier 2, Hoboken, at 1:30 o'clock Colonel House was sitting in an easy chair in his suite on the upper deck with Mrs. House beside him. He had a steamer rug over his shoulders and wore a heavy black overcoat with a fur collar because of the raw, damp weather. It was the first time since the Northern Pacific left Brest, last Monday, that he had left his bed.

Despite his tired look, he was cheerful in manner when he was interviewed. He laughed outright when he was asked if he was going to advise President Wilson to turn over the affairs of the nation to Vice President Marshall, as suggested in a letter written by United States Senator Moses, published yesterday. Questioned regarding his health, Colonel House said:

"I was attacked in Paris with a recurrence of the gravel from which I suffered a year ago, and for the last eight days I have had a fever, which left me today. I want to get home and in bed, where I can rest comfortably until I have recovered my health. I hope to be able to see reporters in three or four days, and expect to go to Washington next week.

"Is there any truth in the rumor that you have decided to retire from the diplomatic service and public life altogether?" was asked.

"Everything depends on my health," he replied.

"Have you anything to say about the Bullitt statements, which were characterised as untrue by the British representatives at the Peace Conference, including Premier Lloyd George?"

"I have nothing to say on that subject," he answered. He was reticent on the subject of the League of Nations, except to remark that he thought it had been discussed pretty thoroughly.

"Did you notice any improvement in general conditions in Europe since the armistice was signed?" was another question.

"Yes, I think there has been gradual improvement. At times it seemed as if there was a great peril for the nations, but the crisis passed safely."

"What is your opinion of the President's illness?"

"I do not know anything about it beyond the daily bulletins sent to me by wireless from Secretary Tumulty."

The gangway of the ship slanted at an angle of forty-five degrees, and Major Gen. David Shanks, commander of the Port of Embarkation, and Dr. Albert Lamb, the Colonel's physician, consulted on how the invalid was to get ashore. Colonel House said he could walk down with assistance, and descended slowly, supported by Dr. Lamb and an army officer, while General Shanks assisted Mrs. House.

Arrangements had been made for Colonel House and Mrs. House to cross the Hudson to the foot of West Thirty-fifth Street on the army tender Lexington, but because of the wet raw weather it was decided that he should be driven to his home, 146 East Fifty-third Street, in General Shanks's automobile.

FARMERS WANT PAY BASED ON LONG DAY

Concede 8 Hours to Labor, but Want More Themselves Because They Work More.

WILL BE HEARD TOMORROW

Industrial Conference Committee May Decide Steel Strike Arbitration Request Today.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.—The needs of American farmers, including recognition of the right of the farming class to remuneration on the basis of the number of hours per day of work, will be laid before the National Industrial Conference when it reconvenes Tuesday.

O. E. Bradfute of Xenia, Ohio, one of the farmer delegates in the public group, announced today that the farmers' representatives would have a resolution setting forth the views of the farmers ready for presentation when the conference resumes its sessions.

Prior to the meeting of the full conference, however, it is expected that definite steps will be taken toward the settlement of the issue raised by the request of the labor group that the conference appoint a committee to arbitrate in the steel strike. Action of some sort on this issue is looked for tomorrow, when the conference's general, or "steering" committee meets. Members of the committee, who spent the week-end in New York, are expected to bring back word as to whether mediation by the conference would be accepted by the United States Steel Corporation.

The farmer delegates, it was said by Mr. Bradfute, do not object to the payment of wages to organized labor on the basis of an eight-hour day, but they believe that the farmers are entitled to remuneration for the longer hours of their working days.

There are five representatives of the farmers in the conference, three of whom, Charles S. Barrett of the Farmers' Co-operative Union, T. C. Atkson of the National Grange, and J. N. Tittemore of the American Equity Society, were named by the three leading associations of farmers and sit as members of the employers' group. The two others, L. D. Sweet of Carbondale, Colo., and Mr. Bradfute, are members of the public group. E. T. Meredith of Des Moines, another member of the public group, is primarily interested in farming matters, but he was called away after the opening of the conference.

Several of the farmer delegates are of the opinion that a national farming conference will be called after the industrial conference has adjourned, and that settlement of their troubles is not within the scope of the gathering now in session. However, they expect to take an active part in the discussion of the high cost of living question with the intention of showing that the blame cannot rightly be laid to the farmer.

TESTING NEW MOTOR FUEL.

Britisher Tells of an American Invention.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 12.—Interest has been aroused in Nottingham by the experiments which are being carried out by Alderman Ball as to the value of a new chemical fuel for driving motor cars.

Alderman Ball told an interviewer that he was negotiating with an American inventor now in this country for putting it on the market. So far as he had experimented with it, he said, the mixture was all that was claimed for it as fuel, and he had driven thirty miles on a gallon at a very cheap rate. If the inventor's claims were justified by further experiments, he said, he believed the fuel would revolutionize the motor transport industry.

What the substance is the inventor and testers are keeping a secret; and beyond saying that a pint of water is put into the tank to start the engine after the mixture has been introduced, Alderman Ball will reveal no details.

"I am not building up too great hopes at this early stage," he said.

It is asserted that for fivepence a distance of thirty miles can be covered, and that the substances used will keep for any length of time when stored.

POINCARE ISSUES DECREE

Ratification of Treaty by Three Powers Considered Effected.

LEAGUE COUNCIL TO MEET

Expected to Take Up Saare Basin Question and Then Wait for Our Senate to Act.

5 WEEKS' MORE DEBATE HERE

With 75 Reservations in Sight, Vote in Washington Is Not Expected Before Nov. 15.

PARIS, Oct. 12.—The state of war in France and Algeria is declared to be ended and the censorship lifted by two Presidential decrees signed on Saturday, which become effective on Monday through publication in the official journal.

The approval of the Peace Treaty with Germany by the French Senate is considered as completing the ratification of the compact by three of the great powers signatory.

The state of war officially ended by the decree will terminate the state of siege, remove the war restrictions which have been maintained, and restore the liberty of peace there.

The making of enforced closing hours of public establishments will make possible a return to conditions prevailing in 1914, with possible limitations as to the use of light because of the fuel shortage. The publication of the ratifying law will be considered as setting the date from which will run all the time limits fixed in the various laws for moratoriums and rent payments.

These laws refer variously to "the end of hostilities," in the "duration of the campaign" to the "duration of the war" and to the "re-establishment of peace." According to a law which has been passed by the Chamber, and which the Senate is expected to approve without amendment, the date of the promulgation of the ratification will be considered as the date referred to in all these laws. Moratoriums generally will expire six months after that date.

Diplomatic Steps That Will Follow.

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Oct. 12.—With three allied powers, England, Italy and France, having in effect ratified the Versailles treaty, attention now turns to the official acts by which the state of peace will be formally established.

After the signing by the French President which will complete French formal ratification, there remain four steps.

The first will be the deposit with the Secretary of the Peace Conference at the Quai d'Orsay of separate diplomatic instruments certifying that the chiefs of the states of Germany and of three allied powers have ratified the treaty. Ebert's ratification has been there two months. Poincaré's will be there probably on Wednesday. King George's and King Victor Emmanuel's are expected to be deposited by that time.

The second step will be the certification to the Peace Conference that the certificates of ratification have been deposited by Germany and by three allied powers. This will take place as soon as step number one has been completed.

Step three will be the formal promulgation of the treaty by the Peace Conference and by the official journals of the four governments.

The fourth step will be to put the treaty in force, which means the setting by the Peace Conference of the formal date from which Germany's obligations, beginning with the coming into force of the treaty, will be calculated.

It is held here that the first meeting of the Council of the League of Nations should be called by President Wilson to meet in Paris within a few days after three powers deposit their ratification certificates. It is believed by Americans that this meeting will deal only with the Saare Basin matter, and other affairs which, under the terms of the treaty, must be regulated within fifteen days after the Treaty comes into effect, and that then the Council will wait for action in Washington before proceeding further.

Lansing Not Yet Notified.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.—Secretary Lansing said late tonight that he had received no notification that there had been deposited at Paris ratifications of the Peace Treaty by England, France, or Italy.

Under the terms of the treaty it is to come into effect when ratifications by Germany and three of the principal allied and associated powers have been deposited and a procès-verbal of that fact drafted. When such a procès-verbal has been drawn up stating that ratifications of the treaty by Germany, England, France, and Italy have been deposited at Paris, the treaty would come into effect, but only as between the powers that have ratified.

The treaty thus would not come into force as affecting the United States until deposit had been made of the ratification of the treaty by the United States Government.

VOTE ON SHANTUNG WILL BE ON THURSDAY

Senate Will Then Take Up the "Six to One" Amendment and Vote Will Be Close.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.—With Senator Lodge, the majority leader, making the chief speech, tomorrow, in behalf of the Foreign Relations Committee's amendment to restore the economic rights of the Shantung Peninsula to China, instead of giving them to Japan, as the treaty with Germany provides, the debate on Shantung will reach its final stages. Vote on the amendment, Senator Lodge expects, will come by Thursday.

The most optimistic prophecy of the Republican leaders gives 55 votes in favor of the amendment. Once it is defeated, advocates of a reservation, among whom are numbered several of the "middle-ground" Republicans, will get together in an effort to concentrate upon one that will embody the principle of the Lodge amendment but will not strike at the treaty itself and thus necessitate a resubmission of the pact to the allied signatories.

Senator Lodge already has tentatively announced himself as willing to accept a reservation on the Shantung amendment but will insist on a vote on the amendment, in view of the demand of the "irreconcilables." A reservation, the Senator thinks, would muster at least 51 votes, or two more than would be necessary, with the entire Senate voting, to adopt it.

The "middle-ground" Senators gave up hope today of being able to effect a compromise on the Shantung amendment through a reservation, when they learned that Mr. Lodge would not consent to abandon his amendment. Their program will be to swing as much strength as possible against the amendment and later to put in their reservation.

With Senator Johnson, of California, back from his western stumping tour in opposition to the League of Nations covenant, this week, his amendment to equalize the votes of the United States and Great Britain in the League Assembly, according to the present plan, will be moved for debate immediately after the Shantung amendment is voted on. Senator Hitchcock, the minority leader, will move that the Johnson amendment be taken up at once, he indicated today, unless Mr. Lodge takes that step himself.

"While I have tried by every means in my power to expedite the handling of the treaty," said Mr. Hitchcock today, "it seems that the Senate is moving all too slowly with it. The debate is proceeding day by day, but the Senate has accomplished nothing in the way of disposing of amendments except to vote on those of Senator Fall.

"The way the treaty is going in the Senate, it now seems hopeless to expect a final vote anywhere around Nov. 1, as we had expected a week ago. After the amendments are finally voted on, there will come the reservations and, following those, the vote on the resolution of ratification itself. Making allowance for debate on all these steps, I don't see how we can have the last vote on the treaty before Nov. 15."

Senator Hitchcock expected, he said, that there would be several amendments, besides those advocated by the Foreign Relations Committee majority, to be offered by individual Senators, covering various phases of the treaty. As The New York Times has already indicated, there will be some 75 reservations to be acted upon, four offered by the Foreign Relations Committee and the others by different Senators.

The Administration forces, Senator Hitchcock said, would oppose all reservations that would have the effect of amendments to the treaty. He reiterated his assertion of last week that, if the Foreign Relations Committee's reservations are adopted, the Administration Democrats would vote against the ratifying resolution of which they are to be a part.

"We assuredly have at least seven more votes than the thirty-three necessary to reject the ratifying resolution with those reservations embraced in it," said Mr. Hitchcock. "This step, I may say, will be taken by the forty Democrats now committed to it, despite the insistence of the Republican leaders that, by doing so, we would be killing the treaty.

"Of what avail would be the treaty with the deadly reservations projected by the majority? The Democrats would rather vote against it than assent to any such killing changes."

Senator James B. Reed of Missouri will join Senator Johnson of California in a combined attack on the League of Nations in Madison Square Garden next Saturday evening. The mass meeting at which they are to speak is under the auspices of the American Woman's League Opposed to the League of Nations.

MORE TROOPS CALLED TO QUELL BREST RIOTS

Arsenal Workers Force Flour Mill Men to Join Them—Smash Shop Windows.

BREST, Oct. 12. (Associated Press.)—The arsenal employes, numbering 4,000 men, who went on strike Saturday, have been carrying out serious demonstrations, requiring active measures by the port commander and the military to check.

The strikers compelled the workmen in the big flour mills which supply the whole department of Finisterre to join them, and also the employes of other plants. They have indulged in various acts of sabotage, and on Saturday afternoon marched through the main streets, smashing the shop windows. Immediately all the shops were closed.

The local garrison was inadequate to cope with the situation, and Admiral Salaun, Port Commander, summoned two squadrons of cavalry and an additional force of gendarmes. Four squadrons of cavalry reached here today, and the banks, post office, and other public buildings, as well as the big stores are guarded by the military.

The strikers this morning made further demonstrations. Several shots were fired, but there were no casualties.

The bakers have joined the strikers, and the military bakeries are supplying the people with bread.

Film of the Signing of Peace Brings No Applause for Allies in Sofia.

SALONIKI, Oct. 11.—Dispatches received from Sofia say that demonstrations favorable to the Germans took place recently at a moving picture theatre in that city at which pictures of the signing of the treaty at Versailles were exhibited.

The crowd was silent when the Allies delegates were shown in the Hall of Mirrors, but vigorously applauded when the German representatives made their appearance.

Gouraud Promises Justice in Syria.

PARIS, Oct. 12.—General H. J. E. Gouraud, the newly appointed French Commissioner in Syria and Commander-in-Chief of the French Army in the East, in an interview today with a representative of the Havas Agency declared that France desired in Syria to follow the same policy of justice which had made friends for her among the Mussulmans. He said he would protect every creed in Syria, but would not favor any party or religion.

RIGA SITUATION DISMAYS FRENCH

BRITISH PLANS MISCARRY

Balkan Confederation Scheme Believed to Have Collapsed—More Talk of Intervention.

By WALTER DURANTY.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Oct. 12.—The Riga situation has filled the French press and public with unconcealed dismay. Curiously enough, the reasons for this dismay differ considerably, according as the dismayed parties possess or lack knowledge of the facts of the case.

Thus the man in the street and the less well-informed newspapers are horror-stricken at the idea of von der Goltz defying the Peace Conference to the point of capturing an important city and getting away with it.

"What," they say, "here's a boche Prussian, a Junker boche, behaving like this! Mon dieu! Who won this war, after all?"

The minority, however, that are in the secrets of the gods, and know that until very recently von der Goltz and his forces had been acting to all intents and purposes under the orders of Marshal Foch, and formed the left wing of the famous anti-Bolshevist "cordon sanitaire," have a different and more serious cause for alarm. Their dismay, as a Temps editorial shows, is based on the fact that the Germans are making in the Baltic provinces a very strong, and so far successful, bid for the friendship of the Russian anti-Bolsheviki.

The Temps' sneer at the impracticability of the British scheme to build up a series of weak buffer States on the western frontier of Russia which will be under the commercial domination of Britain shows clearly enough what is in the mind of the French Foreign Office.

Despite Lloyd George's half advances to the Bolsheviki for the benefit of the British Labor Party, Great Britain has been playing a strongly anti-Bolshevist game throughout. On the one side she has equipped Denikin with British uniforms and supplied him with British guns, tanks, airplanes, munitions, transport and supplies, and on the other she has tried to build up through the agency of General Gough a Baltic confederation whose combined forces, also British equipped, should drive at Petrograd while Denikin moved on Moscow.

What Great Britain Aimed At.

From the British viewpoint, the plan, had it succeeded, would have been admirable. First, the bony of Bolshevism would have been exorcised once for all. Secondly, a stable and not too radical government with which one could do business and which would be able to pay its debts—'twas with the latter bait that the French were kept sweet, coupled with the reminder that it would not cost them anything—would have been well disposed toward Britain in view of the services rendered—an important factor for the success of British plans in Persia and Mesopotamia. And a Baltic confederation by holding Russia's western gate would have kept her more or less under Britain's thumb.

The latter part of the scheme seems to have only just dawned upon the French and its savor is bitter in their mouths.

Unfortunately for this plan, the Baltic States were very weak sisters. All of them contained quite a considerable Bolshevist element of their own, and even the anti-Bolsheviki had found the Red army to be a nut which took a lot of cracking. British withdrawal from the northwestern front was the final straw on the burden of their discontent. With one accord they took a step which the prospect of that withdrawal had long made inevitable and agreed to meet the Bolsheviki at Dorpat with a view to signing peace.

They would certainly have got easy terms, as the Bolsheviki realized they could then throw their full weight against Denikin, whose progress, thanks to his British equipment, was much too rapid for their liking. Once, however, the Reds could do that, Denikin's chances, it was held, would vanish to a minimum.

The anti-Bolshevist Russians, so it is explained here, in despair began to negotiate with the only available force in sight, namely Von der Goltz's army. Gough had seen this coming for a long time as his attempts to get the Baltic States into line grew less and less successful, and that is why for the last three or four months he has been urging the conference to insist upon Von der Goltz's withdrawal.

The Russian anti-Bolsheviki are a reactionary lot. Anyway, despite the efforts of the British and French press, they saw eye to eye with von der Goltz and the semi-German Baltic landowners. Gough foresaw their eventual co-operation unless he could fill von der Goltz's place with the armies of the Baltic states. He perhaps thought he could, but Foch, who advised the conference on the matter, seems to have been less certain, and probably judged it better that von der Goltz should continue to act as a solid barrier against the spread of Bolshevism in that neighborhood.

While he did so passively and the Baltic States kept the Bolshevist army occupied by at least an appearance of hostility, it was all very well, but when they threw up the sponge and von der Goltz launched an active anti-Bolshevist policy, of which the move on Riga was the first step, it was a very different matter indeed.

The Paris Council was now faced by an exceedingly awkward dilema. Either they must let the Germano-Russians go on, with the consequence that New Russia—in the event of the anti-Bolsheviki succeeding—will regard Germany as her savior and, what is more, have plenty of active Germans on the spot to keep that sentiment good and warm, or they must check them, with the all too probable result of Denikin's defeat.

Germany Called Powerless.

Incidentally, the latter course has some difficulties of its own. The German forces having thrown in their lot definitely with the Russians cannot be controlled by the German Government. No matter whether the pressure on the latter be only economic or involve the French occupation of Frankfort also, the Berlin Government, expert observers say, is as powerless against its disobedient sons at it is as the Italians are against d'Annunzio at Fiume.

To be effective it looks to these experts as though the allied action would have to take the form of an armed expeditionary force, and who is to provide it seems a pretty big question. Perhaps they will call upon America. In any case, it is argued, that would mean the nullification of the policy of support to the anti-Bolshevists, Denikin and Kolchak, whose last chance would thus be destroyed.

The whole situation is but the latest and worst instance of the general confusion in Europe caused by the conflicting aims and policies of the Paris Council.

LONDON, Oct. 12.—The London County Council has received an offer from the Bush Company to rent a vacant site between the Strand and Aldwych at $275,000 a year on a ninety-nine-year lease.

The site which has an area of 126,050 square feet has remained unimproved since the reconstruction of the Strand years ago except for the temporary erection of the Y. M. C. A. Eagle Hut for American soldiers and sailors.

The Bush Company is associated with the Bush Terminal Company of New York and is receiving substantial financial support from America. It is proposed to establish an exchange on the site with provision for a permanent exhibition and salesroom for manufactured articles, commercial and trade libraries and a buyers' club such as is embraced in the Bush Terminal Exchange in New York City.

TEAMSTERS' STRIKE TO TIE UP STATIONS

ence possible at the State's command to bring about speedy action."

Union's Plea Heard Thrice.

According to Mrs. Henry Moskowitz, Secretary of the Governor's Labor Board, the demands of the teamsters have been before the Adjustment Board for consideration since May 8, last, and committees from the union have three times had a hearing.

The teamsters were on strike for six days last May when the strike was called off and the demands were taken under consideration by the Adjustment Board. Mrs. Moskowitz said that the drivers of the five-ton trucks, who have been receiving $28.92 a week, are demanding $35, while drivers of lighter trucks now want $33 a week and platform truck drivers ask for $115 a month. The drivers of coal trucks would not be involved in the walkout, it was said at the headquarters of the teamsters' union.

The strike of express drivers would be reflected in the parcel post, and arrangements were being made by the postal authorities last night to put to work all facilities available for this work.

Word from Jersey City was to the effect that the one thousand or more drivers, helpers and other employes of the American Railway Express in and about that city were ready to join with the men in New York. There were about 800 of the men at a meeting at White Eagle Hall, Jersey City. After waiting until about 10 o'clock for some word from the union headquarters in this city they went to their homes.

The men said they would go to work as usual this morning, and would continue at work all day unless they are ordered to quit by the officials of the union. They are members of Teamsters' Union 450.

ment of a definite character regarding the President's illness, rumor and gossip have run wild in Washington and all sorts of stories have been current for more than a week. Some of these have been brought to the attention of Dr. Grayson, who has either denied them informally or refrained from commenting.

Senator Hitchcock, who is the Democratic leader in the Senate and has made visits to the White House during the past week, was asked by THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent tonight whether he possessed any information in corroboration of the statements contained in the Moses letter. After the text of the letter, as published, was read to Senator Hitchcock, he said:

"That does not conform to what information I have about the President's illness. I should call those statements a very gross exaggeration of the President's condition. I happen to know that the President has reached some important decisions while he was in bed. He has had submitted to him some important matters on which he has passed. I doubt if he could have done so if his case was as represented in the letter attributed to Senator Moses."

When Senator Hitchcock was asked about the character of the decisions that had been reached by the President on the matters submitted to him, he said that naturally he could not say anything as to that.

The statement in the Moses letter that the President had suffered some kind of a cerebral lesion and that one of the readily discernible results was a slight facial paralysis, was a repetition of a story that has been current everywhere in Washington during the last week. It is the story that has been given the most credence in Senatorial cloak-room gossip, and the one that has survived more persistently than any other explanation of the President's illness, in the absence of an official denial.

Some of the stories told in Washington are regarded as without any real foundation, others are considered ridiculous and have not persisted, but the statement that the President has had a cerebral lesion or a slight blood-leakage from one of the blood vessels in the brain continues to be circulated by men in and out of public life who profess to have their information from some one in a position to know. This story has been brought to the attention of Dr. Grayson, and he has consistently declined to authorize official denial or comment upon it.

It is known, though, that the one thing the President's physicians have been trying to guard against is the snapping of a blood vessel in the President's head.

This much has been informally admitted to the correspondent of THE NEW YORK TIMES by one of the attending physicians.

"What we have been afraid of," this physician stated last Monday night, "is that something might snap, and for that reason the treatment prescribed for the President is absolute rest, both mental and physical."

Whether this fear has been based on absolute knowledge that there had already been a slight cerebral leakage or on knowledge that the President's condition of nervous exhaustion was such that a strong flow of blood to the brain might cause such a snapping of an artery, is something that no one connected with the case has been ready to state. However, fear that there might be such a snapping, resulting in paralysis, is undoubtedly entertained by the physicians and explains the statement in yesterday's bulletin in which all four physicians joined, that the President's condition "is such as to necessitate his remaining in bed for an extended period."

The statement attributed to Senator Moses that "one of the readily discernible results is a slight facial paralysis" was also a repetition of the statement that has been given wide circulation here that the President has experienced some difficulty in properly using the muscles of the lower part of his face. Nothing is learned to confirm the statement that there has been any kind of paralysis of the muscles of the face, but it is known from an authoritative source that while the President was touring the West there was a twitching of the muscles of one cheek while he was speaking, that this was noticeable at Pueblo and while he was being hurried home by special train from Wichita. Even before the President's trip West Dr. Grayson had at times noticed such a twitching, and whenever it occurred it was always regarded as an index to the physician that the President was overstraining himself physically.

A prominent Democratic Senator, who did not care to be quoted, made the statement tonight that he had learned definitely that Secretary Tumulty had not seen the President from the time of his return until Friday, Oct. 10. That was the day the President had made a request for certain information from the Director General of Railroads, which Mr. Tumulty had been sent to obtain.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12. (Associated Press.)—The President was said by officials at the White House today to have spent a quiet and restful Sunday, although somewhat depressed because of a drizzling rain which began to fall during the night and continued all day.

Mrs. Wilson again spent a part of the day reading to him, as has been her daily custom since his illness, and strains from the talking machine from the sick room could also be heard at intervals.

HAD SLIGHT RETINAL LESION.

Reason for D. De Costa's Trip to Paris to See Wilson.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 12.—It became known here today that Dr. J. Chalmers De Costa's trip to Paris, while President Wilson was attending the Peace Conference was for the purpose of examining the President for trouble which had previously caused a retinal hemorrhage.

A well known surgeon here said today: "It has, of course, been known for over a year that long before he went to Paris the President did have a slight retinal lesion, with slight hemorrhage of the retinal surface, that soon cleared up, but, naturally, called for an expert oculist to examine his eye and his general condition and his tendencies. Since then he has gone through more exhausting labors than almost any other man in the world.

"When he succumbed to the exhaustion of this train trip west, it was the most prudent thing in the world to call in an opthalmologist in addition to the medical men and the nerve specialist, since an examination of the retinal surface would indicate whether or not there was a congestion or hemorrhage there, and, consequently, whether there was more than a localized congestion that led to the attack that brought about the cancellation of the trip.

"Apparently the eye examination was favorable and the indications are that the local congestion will yield and is yielding to treatment readily and that the President, as the phrase goes, will fully recover, but, of course, slowly and will be precluded from undertaking in the future the exhausting activities which have brought about his present condition."

WOMEN FLAGSHIP'S GUESTS

New York League of Women Workers Entertained on Columbia.

More than 3,000 members of the New York League of Women Workers yesterday afternoon visited the Columbia, Rear Admiral Hughes's flagship, where they were entertained by the officers of the ship and her crew. The young women had been invited to visit the ship as a return courtesy for their dances and entertainments given the men of the navy at the clubhouse during the war. The officers of the league, Mrs. Kenneth Muir, Miss Virginia Potter, Mrs. Courtlandt D. Barnes, Mrs. H. Otto Wittpenn and Mrs. Ralph Helmer, chaperoned the members. Admiral Hughes and his staff received the guests.

A campaign for 10,000 new members, and $100,000 with which to extend the work of the league, opened yesterday and will continue until Oct. 25. Headquarters have been established at 3 East Forty-fifth Street. Mrs. Henry Oliveheimer has been chosen to lead the drive.

ADVANCES DATE OF RETURN FLIGHT

Army Order Says Aviators May Recross Continent After Two to Four Days' Rest.

SPATZ GETS SECOND PLACE

Unofficial Time Indicates He Defeated Lieutenant Kiel by 31 Seconds.

MORE FLIERS DUE TODAY

Captain Smith Leads Those Coming East—Drayton in the Van in Westward Race.

With forty-three American Army fliers ready to resume their flights this morning in the ocean-to-ocean reliability race, after resting over Sunday, the announcement was made here yesterday that the War Department had issued orders for the aviators to start on the return trip across the continent within four days after landing at either one of the coast terminals. Any aviator may start his second transcontinental flight within forty-eight hours after reaching his ocean goal.

Comparison of the official figures of the flight of Lieutenant Belvin W. Maynard to the Pacific Coast with the unofficial figures on the flights of the two aviators who arrived here Saturday from San Francisco showed that the actual flying time of the preacher-aviator in his ocean-to-ocean journey was an hour and fourteen minutes better than that of his rivals.

Maynard's official flying time was 24 hours 59 minutes and 48¼ seconds, or virtually 25 hours flat. The unofficial flying time of Major Carl Spatz, who arrived at Mineola on Saturday evening, was 26 hours 13 minutes and 44 seconds. The time of Lieutenant C. E. Kiel, who also grounded at Mineola, was 26 hours 14 minutes and 15 seconds, or 31 seconds slower than the unofficial time of Major Spatz.

Air Service Revokes Order.

It had been announced from Air Service headquarters in Washington on Saturday night that none of the aviators would be permitted to start the return flight before next Monday, but the orders received here yesterday read in part:

"Contestants who have completed the first half of the round trip flight will remain at terminus control station not less than forty-eight hours or more than ninety-six hours. In case a contestant cannot depart at the end of ninety-six hours in time to make the first stop before sunset he may be held until morning. Department Air Service officers will immediately notify respective control stop commanders of the return flight. Split seconds will not be reported in timing Arrivals and Departures. No new contestants permitted."

The order was signed by Major Gen. Charles T. Menoher, commander of the Air Service, and revoked the previous announcement that the race would not be resumed until next Monday. The same regulations will govern the second half of the contest as were used in the first series of flights across the continent.

Members of the Contest Committee of the American Flying Club, who are assisting the Air Service in the management of the contest, said last night that they believed that Sunday was to be counted out of the forty-eight hours' required rest for aviators who reached the coast stations on Saturday. They pointed out that under this rule Lieutenant Maynard might leave the Pacific Coast on his return transcontinental flight some time tomorrow afternoon.

Under favorable conditions, the officers pointed out, Lieutenant Maynard might be able to reach one of the Nevada control stations before nightfall tomorrow. This would give him a good start for winning the race on elapsed time and, with luck as it was on his flight to the Pacific, he might be able to reach Mineola on Friday afternoon or Saturday morning, thus completing the two transcontinental flights within nine days.

Rivalry of Spatz and Kiel.

Neither Major Spatz nor Lieutenant Kiel will be able to start back to the Pacific until Wednesday morning and, exercising their option under the rules, they may wait here until Friday. The rivalry between these two aviators is so keen that officers at Roosevelt Field believe that if one starts the other will be in the air a minute later.

The members of the Contest Committee said the race between Major Spatz and Lieutenant Kiel had been so close throughout, both in elapsed time and actual flying time, that there was the basis of a lively dispute if the two rivals and their friends were disposed to desert the amicable spirit they had displayed continuously since the race for second placed narrowed down to two contestants.

There were rumors among officers of the American Flying Club that Kiel was not satisfied with an incident at the Binghamton control station, when the two rivals were waiting to begin their last jump of 142 miles to Mineola. The report was that a suggestion had been made to Kiel that, in deference to the superior rank of his rival, he delay his start for ten minutes and thus permit the Major to be first to finish the flight from the Pacific. Neither of the officers would discuss this report.

The two army men met the members of the Contest Committee at the American Flying Club at 11 East Thirty-eighth Street and checked over their figures for the flight. Pending an official decision as to whether the flight of Major Spatz should have been considered finished when he landed at Haselhurst Field by mistake or when he landed at Roosevelt Field, about four minutes later, it was decided to figure the unofficial time up to the point of landing at Haselhurst.

Winner of Second Place.

Figuring the unofficial time with this advantage, Spatz took second place from Kiel by 31 seconds. These unofficial figures give the Major's time from the Pacific Coast as 26 hours 13 minutes and 44 seconds, or about an hour and twelve minutes slower than the official time of Lieutenant Maynard's flight. Lieutenant Kiel's unofficial time was 26 hours 14 minutes and 15 seconds.

Major Spatz said he went up again at Haselhurst when he had discovered his mistake, and that he saw the flares at Roosevelt Field just starting to burn. Officers at Roosevelt Field said that his version was true, and Colonel Archie Miller, in command of all the fields, telegraphed to Washington the Major's actual time of landing at Haselhurst Field, as well as the time of his landing at the official terminus.

Both Major Spatz and Lieutenant Kiel said they did not wish to fly back across the continent, because of the severe strain of the trip, and would prefer to return by train. Both added that they would follow the orders of the Air Service commanders, however, so that data on the reliability of the various makes of airplanes could be obtained.

Pending official decision none of the prizes of the American Flying Club is to be awarded, nor can either of the aviators collect any of the money offered as expenses for "seeing the city" to the first Pacific Coast aviator to land at the Atlantic Coast. Lieutenant Kiel showed a TIMES reporter a letter yesterday from Charles K. McClatchy, editor of The Sacramento Bee, who said that he wished to pay $100 "expense money" to the first aviator landing at Mineola from San Francisco. Mr. McClatchy's instructions were for the winning aviator to present the letter at the office of THE NEW YORK TIMES, after it had been properly countersigned by the commanding officer of the Mineola control station.

With the resumption of the race this morning, interest is in the struggle of six aviators for fourth place in the first half of the reliability contest. The aviator nearest to his goal is Captain Lowell H. Smith, whose De Haviland-4 was tuned up at Rochester yesterday for the two jumps to the Mineola terminus, a distance of 267 miles.

LETTS FOUGHT WELL IN DEFENDING RIGA

marksmen and cavalry held the western end of the footbridge, the defending army safely extricated itself and retired across the 200 yards span.

Approximately 4,000 men passed through the city and followed their supply columns into the interior. Then the Lettish Government and official world retired and the duties of the police were taken over by the Landwehr, whose German blood gives them a neutral status.

The German troops were expected across the river within an hour, but the Lettish rearguard of less than 2,000 men remained in the city under Colonel Berkuls, and it was he who, scorning the idea merely of delaying the Germans, resolved on a fight to the death.

Securely in possession of the suburbs of Torensberg, Colonel Avaleff Bermondt and his forces, finding their entry into Riga proper still disputed, on Friday morning sent over two intimidatory shells. These shells shattered much beautiful masonry, but instead of the expected flag of truce, Riga's reply took the form of high explosive.

It is easy to understand the vexation of the besiegers, for the preponderating part of the population of Riga is German, Russo-German, or Jewish, and these own three-fourths of the city. But leaving behind the ugly job, the Letts without fuss or bother

City Bombarded All Day.

We had a lively time. Riga was bombarded all day, principally with "whizbangs," near the British Mission. The house occupied by some of its members was hit four times. The British and French destroyers were reportedly shelled and compelled to withdraw.

Crossing the city in the evening I found the bombardment had already done widespread superficial damage, the streets being thickly strewn with broken glass and shattered brickwork.

This morning Avaloff Bermondt asked for an armistice and pourparlers in Mitau. "To avoid further bloodshed and allow of combined operations against the Bolsheviki" was his declared object in asking for the pourparlers, but the Letts refused dealings with one who had thus attacked them, and who had been declared a traitor by General Judenich, so the deafening bombardment continues and the heroic Letts persist in a defense which I dare prophesy will establish their fame in all quarters of the world where human courage and national spirit are prized.

October 10.—Brisk rifle fire is still going on, but the Germans are in Riga across the river and the heroic resistance of the Letts has failed, as one knew it must. Throughout these first two days of struggle no assistance has come from Esthonia.

Yesterday afternoon with a Lettish officer I went out on our left flank on which it was known that the enemy was about to throw his weight and which proved to be within two miles of the city. Deep pity mingled with our indignation when we found ourselves on the sandhills where brave Letts armed only with rifles were dying around before a withering blast from an entire company of German machine-gunners. These latter were stealthily advancing from farmhouse to farmhouse in the windows of which they posted their weapons.

My companion encouraged the defenders by promising on his return to headquarters to petition for reinforcements.

On the road we met the only units that remained available. These were not men, but boys enrolled from the schools of Riga only that morning. They had rifles in their hands for the first time. Here they were, with bright, smiling faces walking into the inferno.

A little further on we found a few shells falling amid the suburban houses, where old men and women and children were crouching against the walls.

When armored cars supplemented the enemy's machine guns the Lett's left was gradually driven in, and by midnight we knew Riga had fallen.

Scene of Russo-German Drive on the Baltic

Riga (1) has been occupied by a mixed force of Russians and Germans, but according to Copenhagen advices 50,000 Letts are landing at Libau (2) to take the enemy on the flank.

GERMAN DUPLICITY CHARGED BY ALLIES

If von der Goltz Acted Against Orders Why Was He Not Dismissed, Note Asks.

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Oct. 12.—The Allied and Associated Governments have engaged themselves to help the German Government get the German troops out of the Baltic provinces. Marshal Foch's latest note to Berlin, made public today, declares that full responsibility for the Baltic province situation rests upon the German Government and that the coercive measures now in force, will not be lifted until the German troops withdraw behind their own border.

Marshal Foch has long favored calling on the Polish Army to put the German troops out of the Baltic provinces but has been prevented from so doing by the Supreme Council. The decision not to use the Poles was taken on the insistence of the American peace delegation which is unwilling to be a party to involving the Poles in another war.

The Allies possess the power of advancing from the Rhine to occupy Frankfort and Mannheim and, in addition, attention might be called to the presence of English and French warships in the vicinity of Riga.

As forecasted in these dispatches, the note accuses the Berlin Government of double dealing in the Baltic situation. In effect, it calls the Berlin Government a liar. The note leaves a way open for further diplomatic correspondence and, in fact, in conclusion asks Germany to make immediate reply.

The note does not appear to deal with the immediate situation growing out of the German attack upon Riga, the capture of which is reported today. It refers to the German offensive as a violation of the armistice and objects to the formation in Courland of a German-Russian Government. But so far the Allies have not taken the immediate action demanded on Friday by the Lett delegation here.

The note indicates that the Supreme Council is making haste slowly, although a member of the Supreme Council yesterday stated:

"We are not shooting in the dark on this Baltic proposition. We know that Berlin is double-crossing us and will proceed on that assumption."

Yet the note cannot be called drastic or harsh. Its terminology reminds one that yesterday the Supreme Council sent to Russnaie a note couched in language not strong but persuasive.

Despite the confident public attitude taken by members of the Supreme Council, it may be stated with all confidence that they are worried over the Baltic situation, and realize that to maintain its prestige, the Peace Conference must score a success in undertaking to regulate that situation. The French are clamoring for drastic action, and already French politicians claim that the Baltic situation illustrated the necessity for the League of Nations having an armed force at its disposal, which is a contention they will place before the first meeting of the assembly of the league.

The membership of the Allied Baltic Commission will be announced tomorrow. There will be an American member. The Chairman will probably be a French General, possibly Mangin.

PARIS, Oct. 12.—Following is the text of the note sent to the German Government by the Allied and Associated Powers regarding the evaluation of the Baltic provinces:

"The Allied and Associated Governments note the formally expressed pretensions of the German Government's note of October 7 to undertake and to pursue in a more energetic manner the withdrawal of its troops from the Baltic regions and Lithuania.

"They also consider as opportune the measures decided upon by the German Government for that purpose. But when the German Government contend that the actions they have taken must absolve them from the charge of having neglected to fulfill their honorable obligations under the armistice, it is necessary to point out that the orders of the German Government have, notwithstanding repeated demands and remonstrances on the part of the Allied and Associated Governments, been so long delayed that the German Government now claim to be practically powerless to enforce them.

"It is difficult not to believe that their long delay has been designed, calculated as it was, to lead to the very results which the German Government now affect to deplore. It seems indeed, impossible otherwise to explain their refusal to recall General von der Goltz, who has been their official instrument in creating the present situation in open defiance of the representations of the allied and associated Governments.

"Why was the German recall, thrice demanded, refused? Why was he (Von der Goltz), after being summoned to Berlin only recently, sent back deliberately to the scene of his atrocities, except to complete, under order of his office, the organization, which now affords to the German Government the pretext that the troopers hitherto paid, clothed and transported by them have passed out of their control?

"Has General von der Goltz acted contrary to their instructions? If so, why has not his insubordination been punished, either by formal dismissal or in any other way?

"Unless some very much more satisfactory explanations of these matters than those hitherto afforded are given by the German Government, the allied and associated Governments cannot admit the contention that the German Government has as they have continually made the most energetic efforts to withdraw the German troops from the Baltic States.

"According to recent information received from Latvia, the situation has suddenly become more grave on account of the offensive launched by German troops on Oct. 8. Other troops have been violating the Courland-Lettish neutral zone and have bombarded Lettish positions by armored trains, by airplanes and by poison gas shells. They have threatened the city of Riga and brought about the formation in Courland of a German-Russian Government opposed to the local Government already established.

"In view of this situation, the allied and associated Governments maintain the principle of the respective responsibility of the German Government in the carrying out of the evacuation of the region, and they mean to maintain the integrity of the coercive measures decreed in the third telegram of Sept. 27, as long as the execution has not been undertaken and pursued with all desirable celerity.

"However, for the purpose of concerting the execution of the operation and the lending of assistance to the German Government, the Allied and associated Governments expect to send Allied representatives whose mission should consist of:

"(a) Receiving from the German Government information regarding measures undertaken or decided upon by it as well as to proposing measures which the mission itself may deem advisable;

"(b) In exercising on the spot and with all powers of action attached control of the execution of the measures prescribed.

"The Chairmanship of this Allied Commission should be vested in the general officer appointed by the Allied and Associated Governments. Only when that general officer has informed the Supreme Council of the Allied and Associated Governments that operations of evacuation are progressing normally can the stopping of measures provided for by the telegram of Sept. 27 be considered.

"The German Government is asked to kindly send its answer as soon as possible. The Allied and Associated Governments hereby notify the German Government that they will hold it responsible for any acts of hostility of German troops directed against their representatives in Baltic provinces."

GENUINE ALASKA SEALSKIN
FUR COATS and WRAPS

At Prices as Moderate as a Good Quality "Hudson Seal" Coat

AN artificial pearl may be synthetized to duplicate the subtle fire and silken lustre of its deep sea twin until it puzzles a mineralogist. But the well gowned woman prefers the gem from the shell of an oyster to the one from the fire of an alchemist.

It is the same with furs. Furriers dyed and treated muskrat to resemble seal until smart women admired and wore coats and wraps of Hudson seal. But now it is possible to purchase genuine Alaska sealskin.

The entire Alaska herd is owned by the United States Government, and every process in the treatment and finish of the soft, supple pelts is under Government inspection.

Alaska sealskins, purchased by Franklin Simon & Co. before the advance in price, have been fashioned into handsome coats and wraps in our own Fifth Avenue workrooms, and are now in the Fur Shop, ready for inspection, or will be made to individual requirements (to size 44) at the prices quoted:

A soft answer to winter—coats

First of all there are the materials. Bolivia, tinseltone, peachbloom, silvertone, velour, broadcloth — aren't they just the composite symbol of that dreamed-of wrap? Lovely dusky colorings, tete de negre, faisan, winter blues, subdued shades of fire and flame, and black, as well as that forever-and-ever-popular color, navy blue—they all are here, ready to help make the winter months a success.

Just everything

Perhaps you want a moderately priced coat. Then walk straight to that rack hung with smart bits of winter, that is to say, coats of kitten's ear, suedine, burra, chinchilla, beaver, fox and velour, swathed up in collars of French seal, black opossum and natural raccoon. You will see how smartly styled these are, when you have slipped into one before that long approving mirror.

It-happened-in-Paris-lines

Mark these coats in every material, trimming and fur that thinking, designing modistes and clever, obliging animals have helped to create. They have a certain individuality that will win you at once, and the prices range from $69 to $500.

Whatever you want is waiting. No matter what kind of coat you are anxious to spend the winter with, we have it. Whether you wish an American-made wrap that was inspired by Paris and looks French to the bindings of its buttonholes, or a coat created for genuine utility, or a chic French thing all dash and spice and sparkle—they are all here. Come and make your choice.

ANTI-RED FORCES NEARING PETROGRAD

Jamburg, Only 75 Miles Southwest of the Capital, Is Captured.

RED DRIVE ON IN SOUTH

Moscow Soviet Announces New Attack on Denikin's Front in the Tsaritsin Region.

LONDON, Oct. 12.—An Esthonian communication received in Stockholm says that a detachment of the Russian Northwestern Army has captured Jamburg, about 75 miles southwest of Petrograd.

A Bolshevist wireless dispatch, dated Saturday, received here today, says:

"We assumed the offensive in the Tsaritsin region along the Volga front between the Don and Volga rivers. The operations are developing successfully between the Don and Ketluban."

BERNE, Oct. 11.—The Ukrainian rising against General Denikin in southwestern Russia is continuing, especially in the neighborhood of Kiev, according to reports received here by the Ukrainian mission. Three hundreds of provisions which were on their way along the Dnieper River to the Denikin troops were recently captured by the Ukrainian forces.

Among the troops who are fighting against General Denikin are many former soldiers and mounted peasants who are said to have become enraged against the Cossack leader because of alleged atrocities. Forty women in one village were recently shot, it is said, because their husbands were serving in the Ukrainian army at Odessa, and it is charged that three other women were hanged in the region of Poltava. More than 300 Ukrainian prisoners have been massacred by the Denikin soldiers, it is asserted.

The Ukrainian soldiers are reported to be well armed and to be constantly receiving reinforcements.

RAW TROOPS CAUSED VLADIVOSTOK TROUBLE

Murder of Soldiers Led Allied Command to Demand Russians' Withdrawal.

VLADIVOSTOK, Oct. 3, (Associated Press.)—A misunderstanding has arisen here between the allied command and the representatives of Admiral Kolchak, head of the Omsk Government, as a result of a demand by the Allies that a recently arrived force of new and untrained troops with have been creating disturbances be moved from the city.

The province commander, Rosnov, says he moved in 4,000 troops early in September to forestall a coup d'etat planned by the Social Revolutionists. Armored trains and Cossack detachments also were billeted here for an emergency. The result has been numerous incidents of friction, including the murder of three allied soldiers, one American, one Russian and one Czech, and many minor affrays.

During the last year Kolchak representatives have been maintained here by permission of the allied military force, and the interested military conference decided that the newly arrived Russian troops should be withdrawn from the fortress limits for the sake of law and order, since for a year no Russian troops had been allowed in Vladivostok without the permission of the senior allied commander.

The Japanese General Inigaki, Chairman of the conference, on Sept. 29 sent a communication to General Rozanoff, the Russian military commander in the Far East, ordering the withdrawal of the troops by noon of Sept. 30, declaring that otherwise the necessary measures would be taken to compel the withdrawal.

Rosnov then concentrated his forces. On the 30th Rosnov sent a letter to the Allies quoting a telegram from Kolchak, couched in strong terms, saying that the Allies had made an attempt on the sovereign rights of Russia, and ordering Rozanoff not to move his troops from Vladivostok and even to use extreme measures in order to keep them there.

The Allies have communicated direct with Admiral Kolchak, explaining the local situation, believing that the Omsk Government has not been correctly informed as to conditions prevailing. The belief among them is that Kolchak's orders to Rozanoff were influenced by exaggerated reports sent by Rozanoff misrepresenting the intention of the Allies.

The newspapers have taken up the situation and are bitterly criticising the action of the Allies. A statement credited to General Inigaki has appeared in the newspapers approving of Rozanoff's position, this despite the fact that it was General Inigaki who first proposed the withdrawal of the Russian troops and signed the ultimatum to Rozanoff. A Japanese decoration was presented to Rozanoff today.

The Allies are awaiting further word from Admiral Kolchak.

A dispatch from Omsk dated Sept. 30, dealing with the trouble at Vladivostok, said a vigorous protest by the Omsk Government had led to the withdrawal of the demand of the Allies for the removal of the Russian troops from Vladivostok. Kolchak in his protest voiced his objection to what he considered a violation by the Allies of Russian sovereignty. It was claimed that the allied commanders had exceeded the rights accorded them by the railway agreement, which limited their sphere of action.

The dispatch added that the Omsk Government upheld Rozanoff in his refusal to withdraw the troops, and that it was reported that several of the superior military and diplomatic representatives of the Allies at Omsk had cabled representations to their Governments supporting Kolchak's position.

GIRL FALLS FROM AUTO, DIES

Police Hold Driver of Borrowed Car on Homicide Charge.

While driving a friend's automobile Saturday night, Sidney Salonick, a plumber, of 2,102 Sixty-second Street, Brooklyn, noticed four young girls in his war garden opposite his house. Fearing that they might injure his crops, he ran the machine right into the garden and began to scold the girls. They replied so good-humoredly that he invited them to go motoring with him and they accepted. Three of the girls sat in the tonneau and the fourth, Jennie Gelfand, the 16-year-old daughter of Abraham Gelfand, a tailor of 2,148 Sixty-fourth Street, stood on the running board. The party drove but a short distance on Twenty-second Avenue when the Gelfand girl fell from the running board. The other girls screamed to Salonick to stop, but he put on more speed and drove several blocks before he drew up to the curb and let the girls out. They ran back to find the girl was unconscious. She died yesterday morning at her home of a fractured skull.

The police of the Bath Beach station were notified. Spectators had seen the number of the car, and its owner, Yonee Lazar of 672 East Eighth Street, Brooklyn, said he had lent it to Salonick. Detective Henne locked Salonick up last night on a charge of homicide.

COUNCIL URGES MEN TO RESUME WORK

a letter was drafted to the union leaders setting forth the conditions upon which further negotiations will be considered. The Railroad Administration was represented by A. T. Hardin, Regional Director; A. J. Stone, Federal Manager of the Erie and Chairman of the District Conference Committee; W. J. Tribb, Federal Manager of the New York Central; E. E. Lee, General Superintendent of the Pennsylvania; A. D. Edgar, Superintendent of the Central Railroad of New Jersey; C. A. Joyce, manager of the marine department of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, and H. C. Bixler, Superintendent of the Pennsylvania Railroad. Representing the strikers were Thomas Delahunty, head of the Marine Engineers' Beneficial Association and President of the Marine Workers' Affiliation of the Port; William A. Abner, head of the Masters, Mates and Pilots' Association; William Fink of the Harbor Boatmen's Union; Joseph Stanton, business agent of the Railroad Port and Terminal Workers, and a score of others prominent in marine labor circles. The harbor boatmen are merged with the Port and Terminal Workers and are making the same demand.

Chairman Stone, Mr. Hardin and other members of the Railroad Administration committee emphasized that before the case could be given consideration the men must return to work, pointing out to the members of the committee that the public should not be put to hardships and inconveniences while the matter of wages of comparably few persons are being considered.

Following the executive session of the Railroad Administration committee a letter was sent to the strike leaders signed by Chairman Stone of the Railroad Administration in which the steps leading to the strike were set forth. Mr. Stone said that the Marine Workers' Affiliation of the Port of New York had entered into an agreement with the Railroad Administration on March 7, covering wages and working conditions, to last for one year. Chairman Stone then said that notwithstanding this agreement the Railroad Administration had promised to meet the union representatives in response to a letter dated Sept. 29 requesting an increase in wages and changes in working conditions to become effective Oct. 1. In spite of this offer, Chairman Stone's letter said, and without waiting for the conference, a strike was declared by the union to be effective Oct. 10. The letter then continued:

"It is submitted that this arbitrary and hasty action was taken in violation of the agreement of March 7, 1919, and in the face of definite arrangement for an early hearing of the Port and Terminal Workers' Committee for the purpose of considering the demands presented.

"In view of these circumstances this committee feels that it is only fair that the employes now on strike resume their duties as a precedent to further consideration of their demands. In accordance with the discussion with your committee this morning, it is agreed on the part of the Managers' Committee that upon return to service of the striking employes a committee thereof will be promptly met and a diligent effort made to give full consideration to their demands and to reach an early conclusion in regard thereto, either before the Board of Railroad Wages and Working Conditions in Washington or before a committee representing the Railroad Administration in New York. It is also understood that any agreement which may be reached affecting the wages and working conditions of the employes involved will be made effective on the date of their resumption of duty.

"The request of this committee that the strikers return to duty and proceed in an orderly manner to adjust their grievance through a representative committee is actuated in the interest of the public, who are suffering by reason of the suspension of traffic and whose interests are paramount to either of the contending parties.

"In this connection your attention is called to President Wilson's appeal to all railroad workers under date of Aug. 25, 1919, copies of which are still in force, your consideration and to which should govern your action in this case."

After the conference with railroad representatives the union leaders held an informal meeting at the headquarters of the Marine Workers Affiliation, 26 Park Place. Some radical members made speeches in which they urged a general strike in the harbor and in that way secure their demands by one stroke. Thomas L. Delahunty, Captain William A. Mabey and other conservative leaders would not countenance this talk.

Strikers Jeer O'Connor.

The meeting of the District Council of the International Longshoremen's Association began at 3 o'clock and lasted until 7 o'clock. T. V. O'Connor, President of the International, at first faced an antagonistic audience and at times epithets were hurled at him, because he has stood out against the strike, but he mastered the situation with the aid of Mr. Riley, President of the Council and Chairman of the Strike Committee. Newspaper men were not admitted, but after the meeting the members talked freely of what had been done.

Mr. O'Connor reiterated his former denunciation of Bolshevism and told his hearers that it was not themselves who struck but the I. W. W. within the organization. He renewed his challenges as the cause of the principles of organized labor, and appealed to the delegates' sense of fairness and justice. He characterized the action of the strikers as un-American and Bolshevist and told them that they would forever discredit themselves in the eyes of the American public, and especially in the sight of their employers, if they did not abide by the decision of the National Adjustment Commission, which awarded them 70 cents an hour and $1.10 for overtime.

He assured the delegates that he would be with them in any other action they might take after December 1 if the National Adjustment Commission will reopen the case, if the high cost of living continues at that time.

Mr. Riley also appealed to the delegates. "You are not licked, if you go back to work," he said. "You don't go back losing anything. It would be a very different story if you had to deal only with the private steamship companies, but in this case you fellows are bucking the Government."

Says Soldiers Are Not Longshoremen.

Chairman Riley, of the Strike Committee, said yesterday that the suggestion of putting soldiers at work in place of the strikers would not work out, as the soldiers, in his opinion would not be equal to the job.

"It takes seven soldiers to do one longshoreman's work," he said.

Brooklyn members of the Industrial Workers of the World denied yesterday that activities on the part of their organization had brought about the strike of longshoremen in that borough. There is a local branch of the I. W. W. which meets in Sackett Street, near Clinton, the membership of which is made up largely of Italian dock workers.

"We had a meeting," said one of the members yesterday, "and decided to send out a circular urging a strike. When this circular was ready on Wednesday, we found that we were too late, as the men were already out. The statement that the I. W. W. caused the strike is ridiculous, as we have control over only a few hundred men on the Brooklyn waterfront."

TROOPS TO HANDLE CARGOES.

Gen. Hines Orders Soldiers Here to Unload Army Transport.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.—Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines of the Army General Staff in charge of army transportation, announced today that soldiers had been ordered to the Port of New York to take care of the unloading of the transport Northern Pacific on its arrival today from France. This action was taken, it was explained, after the department had been notified that longshoremen had refused to unload army transports. The soldiers sent to the port for this work, General Hines explained, were members of reserve labor battalions from Camp Merritt.

The decision was reached yesterday by Secretary Baker after a conference with army officials to use soldiers to such extent as might be necessary to load, unload and otherwise handle army transports during the port strike. Secretary Baker said that the army transports would be kept moving because it was very imperative that there should be no letup in their operations. It was the duty of the Government, he said, to maintain its army communications with Europe and with its forces in Germany.

An Extraordinary Special Purchase Brings

200 Women's Fine Coats

of a most superb quality in Material and Making

At $68.00

You cannot possibly judge these handsome coats by the low price at which they are offered. The styles are all exact reproductions of high priced importations, and because the manufacturer was very anxious to introduce the rare quality of his garments to us he made a liberal reduction in his usual fair margin of profit. The models are in straight line, loose back and belted effects, with Luxurious Collars and Cuffs of Maimon Wolf, Sealine Fur, or Taupe Nutria or Natural Raccoon, with large collars.

There is also a splendid assortment of strictly tailored models, with large, convertible collars of self material. Fashioned of lined with good quality silks and warmly interlined. Fifteen models, sizes 34 to 48—and not one coat in the collection that can be duplicated at anything near this price.

SAY GERMANS BACK YOUNG TURK REVOLT

Reports from Asia Minor Tell of Revival of German Interest There.

NEW THREAT TO ARMENIA

Secret Agreement, It Is Charged, Has Been Made Against That Country by Its Neighbors.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.—Activities of the Young Turks in organizing a Government of their own under Kemal Pasha at Konia, in Asia Minor, marks the development of a serious problem in the Near East somewhat similar to the Baltic problem, where German activities engineered by General von der Goltz have developed into a drive on Riga.

The Konia movement marks a resumption of the activities of Young Turk leaders, who were active pro-Germans and led the nation into the great war. It is a continuation of the work of Enver Bey, and evidence has reached Washington that German agents and propagandists, who have been active in Turkey and Asia Minor since the signing of the armistice, have had a large hand in developments leading up to the resuscitation of the Young Turk movement along lines that are causing embarrassment to the Government at Constantinople and some concern to the allied powers.

Reports reaching Washington also say that the Young Turks have been active in endeavoring to pile up troubles for Armenia. A secret agreement, it is said, has been reached between the Young Turks and certain Caucasian and Bolshevist leaders for the obliteration of the Armenians. It is reported that this secret agreement between the Georgians and Azerbaijan pledges both parties to try to keep the non-Bolshevist Russians away from Transcaucasia, to join hands with the Bolsheviki and Young Turks in expelling the Entente from Transcaucasia, the extermination of the Armenians, and, in case of war between the Azerbaijan and the Armenians for Georgia to close all means of communication with Armenia through Georgia.

Between the signing of the Brest-Litovsk treaty and the institution of the armistice, the Transcaucasia and region fell under the control of the Germans and the Turks. German troops in that region, it is said, enjoyed the full support of the Georgia Government and the Germans also obtained certain valuable concessions, mineral and otherwise, while the Tatars embarked on pillage and massacre, killing many Armenians and driving out Russian colonizers. After the armistice the British went in and drove out the Germans; but the British are contemplating withdrawal.

A group of prominent Armenians, most of whom have just arrived in the United States, called on Secretary Lansing on Saturday. They were taken to the State Department by Senator Williams of Mississippi, who introduced a resolution recently providing for American aid for Armenia.

Fall Overcoats

in abundance for men and young men!

The Fall overcoat is no longer a mere "tide-over till Winter." It has struck a style note sufficiently different from that of the heavier Winter models to constitute a reason for its being all by itself.

The light-weight fitted models are just a bit more swagger and the loose-fitting coats a bit more flaring than the heavier ones. But the fabrics lose nothing through being of lighter weight. They will wear through the Fall and will be welcome again when Spring days make a heavy overcoat seem heavier.

You may pick from a large assortment of single or double breasted models in gray herringbone weaves, cassimeres, fancy cheviots, knitted fabrics in many shades, and Oxford vicunas with satin sleeves and yoke linings. Correct as a whole and individually, they are priced all out of proportion to their own superior quality and the prices in other shops.

PERSIA TO SUBMIT TREATY TO LEAGUE

Foreign Minister Says Its Approval Will Be Asked for Agreement with England.

INDEPENDENCE UNAFFECTED

No Permanent Rights or Monopolies Granted—To Maintain Good Relations with France.

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Oct. 11.—Persia intends to submit to the League of Nations here the much-discussed treaty with England, according to an interview given today by Prince Firuz, Minister of Foreign Affairs at Teheran. It was explained that inasmuch as the Shah of Persia, who is in Paris, is traveling incognito, he could not give an interview himself.

Prince Firuz said he could not understand at all why America had gotten so stirred up about the Teheran treaty. He did not say outright it was not America's business. He began by giving a dismal picture of the country. Persia, despite her neutrality, had been ravaged, disorganized, and divided. There were no means of communication or travel. The authority of the Teheran Government was not heard beyond a radius of a hundred miles from the capital. He said Persia had sent a delegation to Paris to tell the Peace Conference about the situation, but that no one would hear it.

In such a situation Persia was unable to reconstitute herself, had to have help, and she turned to England. The agreement concluded with the British Minister, he said, would be submitted to the Persian Parliament at an early date, and then to the League of Nations for approval.

"Nothing in this agreement," said the Prince, "affects the independence of Persia. It gives no permanent rights to Great Britain nor any monopolies. We can fix ourselves the powers of counselors and military instructors it may please us to accept from England."

The Prince declared Persia wished to maintain good relations with France, and expected to continue as in the past to take all her university professors from the French Republic.

ISSUES PASTORAL LETTER.

Bishop Burch Urges Importance of Prosecuting Every Name Campaign.

Bishop Charles Sumner Burch has issued his first formal pastoral letter to the clergy and laity of the diocese. It was read in every Episcopal church and mission at yesterday morning's service. The newly elected Bishop appeals for a "united diocese without partisanship or prejudice," and urges upon the church as its most important immediate task, the prosecution of the Every Name campaign being conducted as the diocese's contribution to the nation-wide campaign for a church reawakening.

Bishop Burch wrote in part:

"While the Church in her offices may call me henceforth your Father in God, may I be permitted to say, in all reverence, that I wish to be looked upon as your brother and servant—a servant of servants; ready at all times, as far as it lies in my power to do so, to give understanding - sympathy, encouragement, genuine and whole-hearted aid, in all your efforts to advance the Kingdom of God. Following this desire, I am ready to consecrate myself, my body, my strength and spirit, to the great work set before me, and to spend myself as my saintly predecessors have done, without stint, to the tasks which they have laid down, and which now I am to take up with you, under God's leading."

The MOST NATIONAL of the National Farm Papers

These Advertisements Appearing in Farm Life Reflect Competent Judgment on Farm Life's Value to National Advertisers

NOT eastern but of the East, not western but of the West, not northern but of the North, not southern but of the South—Farm Life is National in the truest sense because it is of the entire country, not of any section.

Farm Life is published in Southern Indiana where East, West, North and South meet. Here, at the centre of American population, you have the American spirit in its purity. And this spirit appeals to Americans everywhere—Americans born and Americans made. It is this spirit that has given appeal to the literature of James Whitcomb Riley, of Booth Tarkington, of David Graham Phillips, of George Ade; and it is this spirit that gives its appeal to Farm Life and explains why subscribers come to Farm Life so easily and in such ever-increasing numbers.

Because Farm Life's appeal is National—and American—Farm Life's distribution is national. Its national popularity is surprisingly uniform. Its circulation in each state is almost in direct proportion to the farm population in that state. In other words, Farm Life's circulation practically parallels the distribution of farm wealth. That is why Farm Life is such a vital and fast-growing power.

Perhaps Farm Life's congenial friendliness, its unpretentious homeliness, its good-humored sincerity will appeal to you as they appeal to more than 600,000 farmers who buy Farm Life at its full subscription price without any inducement other than the paper itself. Acquaintance with Farm Life will reveal to you the value of Farm Life's advertising pages.

The circulation is now 650 000, and 700 000 is guaranteed for January—evenly distributed in the agricultural states. The rate is $3.00 a line flat, $1350 a page, for the remainder of 1919, and $3.50 a line, $1575 a page, commencing with January. The size of the page is 450 lines—standard for the leading nationals.

FIRST BOHEMIAN BOAT CLUB CREWS TRIUMPH IN COLUMBUS DAY REGATTA ON HARLEM RIVER

BOHEMIAN OARSMEN CARRY OFF HONORS

NONPAREILS LOSE IN G!CS

Cross Current Handicaps Their Intermediate Four, and First Bohemian Crew Spurts Ahead.

In spite of most discouraging weather conditions, the New York Rowing Association gave a strong finish to the local season on the Harlem River yesterday afternoon with one of the best contested Metropolitan regattas held in recent years. The First Bohemian Boat Club carried off the big honors of the Columbus Day meeting, winning three first places and a second out of the ten races on the program. As the Bohemians had no entries outside of these four events, their record represented almost a solid cleanup.

The senior and intermediate singles and the intermediate four-oared gig races all fell to the stalwart Bohemian oarsmen, and in the association senior singles their representative, Albert Kalbac, finished second to David Andres of the Active Boat Club. The Nonpareil Rowing Club stood second on the day's summary of accomplishments, winning the intermediate quadruple sculls, taking second place in the intermediate four-oared gig event and the senior singles, and third in the senior race for four-oared gigs.

Bernauer Wins Singles.

The Ravenswood Boat Club captured the junior singles with William G. Brenauer as its entry, Albert Schweitzer of the Nassau Boat Club finishing second, and Edward E. Mittnight of the Brooklyn Rowing Club third, in a strong field of seven starters. The junior four gig race fell to the Lone Star Boat Club, with the Vikings in second place, and the same club took a third in the intermediate four-oared gig contest. The Metropolitan Rowing Club was credited with second places in the intermediate and junior quadruple sculls and in the intermediate singles, and with a third in the senior singles.

The Vikings were first among the junior double gigs, but had to content themselves with seconds for their other two entries. The Nassau Boat Club took first honors in the junior quadruple sculls, and the Union Boat Club scored a first with its senior four-oared gig and a second in the junior double gig race.

Close Race for Four-Oared Gigs.

The most exciting struggle of the rainy afternoon was the intermediate four-oared gig event. For the first half of this race the First Bohemian and Nonpareil representatives rowed stroke for stroke on absolutely even terms, but beyond the clubhouse of the Nonpareils, near the power house, a creek runs into the Harlem River, creating a cross current which proved troublesome to both crews. The huskier boys at the Bohemian oars overcame this handicap more quickly than did Nona, and from here to the finish they kept a lead which gradually increased to about a length and a half. The Lone Star Boat Club was less than three lengths behind the winners, in third place.

The best time of the day, over the one-mile speedway course from Washington Bridge to Fordham Bridge, was made in the junior quadruple sculls and junior four gig races, both being negotiated in 5 minutes 9 4-5 seconds, a creditable achievement, considering the unfavorable conditions.

Cronin Rows Without a Slide.

In the intermediate quadruple sculls, W. Cronin of the Nonpareils, rowed the entire race without a slide, sitting flat in the bottom of the boat; but in spite of this handicap his crew succeeded in crossing the finish line four lengths ahead of the Metropolitan quartet, in the fair time of 5 minutes 48 seconds.

Great credit is due to the officers and stewards of the New York Rowing Association for their successful handling of the Columbus Day Regatta under unusually difficult circumstances.

GRAND CIRCUIT IN SOUTH.

Atlanta Meeting, the Last of Season, Will Be Held This Week.

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 12.—Horses, drivers, trainers, and all the other appurtenances of Grand Circuit racing were transferred today to Atlanta, preparatory to the opening tomorrow at Lakewood Track of the annual meeting which gives the South its only exhibition of the sport.

Twenty-two races are on the program for the week, including one for a purse of $2,500 offered by the Southeastern Fair Association. Direct C. Burnett, driven by Murphy, and Frank Dewey, driven by Cox, as well as a number of other well-known Grand Circuit entries, will contest for this prize. A number of prizes have been offered locally, and there are also special events for Georgia horses, a number of which have been entered.

The meet will be opened tomorrow with the 2:03 pace, in which Grace Direct, Direct C. Burnett, and other winners will contest.

The 2:14 trot, with McGregor the Great and Marlondale as entries, will be the feature of Tuesday's card. For each remaining day some special event has been added. It will be the last racing of the season for most of the horses.

CHEVY CHASE ON SATURDAY.

Important Steeplechase at Laurel Has Fine Field.

The first of the great Maryland Fall steeplechases will be decided at Laurel Park next Saturday when the $5,000 Chevy Chase, a gallop of two miles and a half for 4-year-olds and over, is to be run. The Chevy Chase is expected to attract every cross-country horse of distinction in training. The only notable absentee next Saturday will be The Brook, and The Brook is not in training. The imported son of Troutbeck, which for two seasons has been rated the best of American cross-country stars, developed a leg a couple of weeks back and J. E. Griffith of Baltimore ordered him into retirement until next season.

The best and fittest of the potential starters are Mrs. Payne Whitney's Syosset and Debadou, Joseph E. Davis's Brooks, winner of the Manly Memorial of 1917; W. R. Coe's Bet, winner of the Manly Memorial of 1918; Mrs. Ambrose Clark's Elysian and Tippy Nix, the last named a two-time winner at Laurel this Fall; F. Ambrose Clark's Robin Goodfellow; Captain Ral. Parr's Warlock, Hughouse, Man o' War, and Le Mat; Mountin Intrimisa's Jingle Lytle; Archibald Barklie's Blankenburg; Mrs. Walter M. Jefford's Barklie and Babcock; Edward M. Weld's Weldship, and Joseph E. Widener's Doubliet, Duettiste, Stonewood, and Shibbereen.

Blankenburg, the cross-country star of two seasons, won at Laurel on Saturday in such fashion as to indicate that he had got back to his best form. He fenced perfectly and stuck it out over the two-mile course in gallant style. Blankenburg, another champion of other years, is, Mr. Barklie believes, about ready to chase to his best form. Blankenburg has been on the shelf since the running of the Brook Cup Chase at Belmont Park in 1916.

Mrs. Whitney and Mrs. Clark won the best of the 4-year-old eligibles for the Chevy Chase in Debadou, the winner last season of the $3,000 Elkridge at Pimlico, and Elysian. Elysian was favorite in the Elkridge, but he threw his rider after he had traveled two miles and finished without his weight. Both Bet and Brooks, as already related, winners of the $10,000 Manly Memorial, have been carefully pointed for the Chevy Chase since last Spring.

DOGS TO SHOW TODAY.

Bronx County Kennel Club Has Big and Attractive Entry List.

Today's bench show of the Bronx County Kennel Club, at the Second Field Artillery Armory, 166th Street and Franklin Avenue, promises, by the size and quality of its entry list, to stand second only to the Westminster classic this season. Over six hundred dogs of all breeds are entered, the total entries for the entire show reaching well above one thousand. Competitors have come in from such distant points as Chicago, Kansas City, and parts of Canada, and practically every one of the local kennels of reputation is represented.

This is the fourth dog-show held by the Bronx County Club under A. K. C. auspices, and the rapid growth of this energetic organization is sufficiently proved by the wide interest attracted by the event. The clues for French bulldogs, with 32 entries of unusually high standard, and with $350 offered in cash prizes in addition to trophies, promises some of the best competition of the day. This class will be judged by McClure Halley. The honor of attracting the largest number of entries in the show goes to the class for Boston bulls. The day's prizes will run beyond $1,500 in cash, with a full line of trophies in addition.

The officers of the Bronx County Kennel Club, of which Borough President Bruckner is an enthusiastic member, are Justice Peter Shields, President; Herman Sneteiler, Secretary, and Henry Rogge, Treasurer. Today's show opens at 9 A. M. and closes at 9 P. M. The price of admission is 50 cents, children 25 cents. The armory is one block east of the 166th Street station of the Third Avenue Elevated.

SCHAEFER IS EASY WINNER.

Defeats Cutler in Two 18.2 Balkline Billiard Matches.

Jake Schaefer defeated Albert Cutler in two well-played exhibitions of 18.2 balkline billiards at Maurice Daly's Academy yesterday afternoon and last night. Schaefer played consistent billiards on both occasions. In the afternoon match, at 400 points, Schaefer made high runs of 104 and 135 and an average of 40, and in the evening, playing 300 points, he scored an average of 42 6-7 and a high run of 126, finishing the 300 in seven innings. He completed the afternoon round in eleven innings.

Cutler was never a dangerous contender for the lead. He scored a total of 70 in the afternoon, with an average of 7 and two runs of 21 each. In the evening, he scored 129, including a high run of 40 and an average of 18 3-7.

Comment on Current Events in Sports

Series Reforms in Order.

The world's series of 1919, a record maker in many respects, brought to light certain features that it would be well for those directing these annual championships to consider. The nine-game system is not likely ever to become as popular as the seven-game plan, and the latter should be restored. The division of money, too, is still a bit top-heavy in some particulars and too light in others.

That the victors are entitled to spoils goes without saying. That winners should receive more than $5,000 per man and losers more than $3,000 each for a few days' work does not couple well with a charge of $4 or $6 for the best seats or even $3 for a grand stand seat. From a distance it seems that the men who invest huge sums and get a winner only occasionally are entitled to more of the receipts than under the present system which calls for giving up more than half of the money taken in at the games, sometimes to players, sometimes to the league treasury, and sometimes to owners of other clubs.

On top of these apparent incongruities comes the lament of the umpires that they should get $2,000 per man for their work, rather than $1,000, the top figure of previous series. They base their argument on the fact that certain substitutes did practically nothing during the series, yet draw down thousands of dollars. They appear to overlook two important features—first that they now get several hundred more than their work would bring them ordinarily, and each official has to do more in a regular championship game than in a world's series contest where four divide the burden; second, that they are not as important to the success of a series as is the ordinary fan. He foots the bills, and it seems unfair to ask him to give up advanced prices to pay out such money as winners, losers, and umpires get from world's series.

From both Cincinati and Chicago have come stories indicating that some fans believed this year's series was extended purposely to eight games. Those who know baseball know that this is not true. But such stories are bound to crop out, and the longer the series is extended the more likely are ugly rumors to spring up. Seven games are plenty to decide superiority. There is such a thing as satiating the fans' appetite, even with world's series battles.

From a playing standpoint the series was well played and fairly won, the Reds showing decisive superiority over the White Sox. The result brings back to the National League some of the prestige that had been waning as a result of almost continuous defeat for a stretch of nine years. To say that the result establishes the fact that the National League is superior to the American in class or playing strength is to assume much. If one wishes to settle this question by world's series results several more series will be required before the American League record of sixteen world's series victories against six defeats in the four preceding series has been equaled. These series may show the comparative strength of pennant winners, but not of leagues, and it is idle to argue that they show the strength or lack of it in either league.

A Glance at the Gridiron.

The football plot thickened considerably on Saturday. In fact, for a few of the leading Eastern elevens it became positively opaque. One of the most surprising turns of the day's play was the emphatic manner in which Lehigh defeated Sanford's Rutgers eleven, which started the game in the position of favorite. Superiority in the punting department and a greater readiness to take advantage of the breaks, whenever they occurred, seemed to make the difference between victory and defeat. Lehigh was evidently stronger than she had been accorded credit for being.

Lehigh's ancient rival, Lafayette, in the meanwhile was giving Princeton a highly uncomfortable afternoon. A matter of twelve inches to the goal line separated the Easton eleven from victory. The impression of the previous Saturday that Princeton and Harvard had reached a more advanced stage of their development than Yale was somewhat altered. It appears on the more recent showing that Harvard and Yale have progressed further toward their best form. However, neither Harvard nor Yale was confronted by an opponent of the calibre of Lafayette, which deserves a world of credit for its admirable play.

Cornell was another eleven that had its troubles last Saturday, the score of 6 to 0 seeming to measure accurately the comparative strength of the Ithaca eleven and that from Williamstown. Again it was the mighty Shiverick who decided the issue. As in the preceding game with Oberlin, it was the Cornell captain who did all the scoring, though it was only a single field goal that defeated Williams. Shiverick seems to be about as important to the Cornell eleven as the Prince of Denmark to the play of "Hamlet."

The Army's defeat at the hands of Syracuse was not altogether startling, as Coach Daly has had to build up his team with inexperienced men, and the Syracuse eleven was known to be fast and heavy. The Navy, for the meantime, had an easy workout against Johns Hopkins. The University of Pennsylvania was another team that scored at will against a lighter and less versatile opponent.

Glenn Warner has his Pittsburgh machine in good working order, but there was a considerable element of surprise in the ease with which West Virginia was conquered. Brown showed unexpected weakness against Colgate, which could have run up a higher score, if Coach Bankart had wished to keep his first string men in action during the greater part of the contest. Cornell will have its hands full when it encounters the team from Hamilton next Saturday.

Columbia, which had no easy time of it in defeating Vermont, will have a harder battle on its hands this week when it meets Williams. Among other games that should furnish a plentitude of fast play this week-end are those between Harvard and Brown, U. of P. and Swarthmore, and Dartmouth and Penn State. Yale will play Cavanaugh's strong Boston College eleven.

Lipton's Challenge.

No event in the sporting world since the cessation of hostilities in Europe has caused as much general satisfaction as the challenge received from the Royal Ulster Yacht Club for a series of races for the America's Cup next Summer. Although the cup committee of the New York Yacht Club has not accepted, formal consideration will be given the challenge in the near future, and the belief obtains in yachting circles that favorable action will be taken.

With business rapidly readjusting itself to after the war conditions there is no reason to believe that the cup committee will deem it necessary to decline the issue. When a similar challenge was received last December for a series of races during the past Summer, business in this country demanded the undivided attention of every one. It was too soon after the armistice to permit favorable consideration being given the challenge. But conditions are different now, and the chances are that next Summer will witness the first races for the America's Cup that have been sailed since 1903 when the Shamrock III, owned by Sir Thomas Lipton, was defeated in three straight races by the Herreshoff boat Reliance.

The challenge is generally regarded as forecasting a general resumption of international competition in all branches of sport, but no event could possibly be arranged that would attract as widespread interest as a series of races, with the famed America's Cup as the stake. For more than sixteen years there has been no competition for the trophy. And the void has been noticeably felt. There has been interest in yacht racing, and some good sport has been seen, but the stimulus given by an America's Cup event has been lacking. If the challenge is accepted and the races arranged for next Summer, a great revival of international interest in yacht racing can be looked forward to.

The cup put up by Queen Victoria was brought to this country in 1851 by the schooner yacht America which defeated the Aurora in a race from Cowes around the Isle of Wight. The trophy has remained here ever since. Sir Thomas Lipton has made four unsuccessful attempts to lift the cup and take it back to England. He tried with the Shamrock, Shamrock II, and Shamrock III. Next year he will try with Shamrock IV, the yacht he sent over here in 1914 but which never got a chance to compete for the coveted prize because of the war.

Sir Thomas made his first attempt in 1899 when the old Columbia defeated the Shamrock in three straight races. Two years later he tried with Shamrock II and again the Columbia won three straight. His last attempt was made in 1903 when the Shamrock III was defeated in three straight by the Reliance. None of his boats has been able to win a race in any of the three series they have sailed in. Nine times boats owned by him have started, and nine times they have been beaten.

Whether or not the Resolute, which was leading in the trials with the Vanitie for the honor of defending the cup in 1914, will sail against the Shamrock IV in 1920 is problematical at this time. The Resolute is in dry dock near Stamford, Conn., and it is possible her owners may request new trials be held next Summer.

The Shamrock IV is in dry dock at Erie Basin and, when Sir Thomas was in this country last Spring, he gave the boat a thorough examination. He then decided that she could be put in racing shape within a short time.

drew, but the contest between the Resolute, Vanitie and Reliance were among the most interesting series of races ever sailed. The Reliance eventually withdraw, but the contest between the Resolute and Vanitie continued. The Resolute had the better of them, but that does not necessarily mean she will be given the honor of defending the cup without a new series of trials being sailed next Summer.

Herron's Golf and the Critics.

The national amateur golf champion has been in our midst and gone. Answering the pleas of New Yorkers who wanted to see him, and perhaps to give himself some little pleasure, S. Davidson Herron of Pittsburgh spent a satisfactory ten days in the metropolitan district. Now the hands have been laid on the table and the golfers in the neighborhood know just about what Herron can do. It certainly is considerable.

Nothing has done more good to settling divers mooted issues than to have had the champion here for the Lesley Cup matches and for the Piping Rock invitation tournament, with his sensational match at Scarsdale thrown in for liberal measure. Herron formerly had a handicap rating in the metropolitan district of 4. This was during his days at Princeton and just previous to the present handicap list. Perhaps that was the reason so many golfers and their retinues have been branding Herron as a fluke champion since his victory over Bobby Jones on his home course at Oakmont in August. Then he came on East for the Lesley Cup event and promptly was defeated rather impressively by Oswald Kirkby. Golf, however, holds the trait in common with other sports, that a champion or a best team is not always an infallible winner, but Herron proceeded to establish a good many unfounded rumors about his ability.

He ran up against a good, ripe, ready collection of the best of this district in the Piping Rock affair and came out on top without having suffered the slightest ill effects. He met a majority of the golfers whom New York is likely to consider of championship timber for next year's national tournament. Yet they all looked alike to Herron, one after another. He surmises, as do most of the amateur linksmen, that the 1920 title series will be played either at Piping Rock or at Nassau. And Herron made the best of a desirable opportunity to play over these courses last week. He did not meet the metropolitan scratch man, Jerome D. Travers, but he did snatch wits and weapons with many of the best bets: Gardiner W. White, handicap 3; E. Mortimer Barnes, Sam J. Graham, Archie M. Reid, Henry J. Topping, John M. Ward, all handicap 4, and George T. Brokaw, Hamilton K. Kerr, J. Frederick Jr., and R. Rhett, Jr., T. Stearns, and Howard F. Whitney, all handicap 5, were included in the Piping Rock tournament. Even so, Davie Herron won about as easily as the oft-recalled trick of rolling off a log.

Undisputably, the presence of Herron hereabouts last week simply emphasizes and accentuates the knowledge that a New Yorker's chances for the 1920 amateur title are not what may truthfully be called rosy. Pitted against Herron, Bobby Jones, Chick Evans, and Francis Ouimet next year, even the best golfer of the metropolitan district is likely to be nervous. Perhaps New York is going through the transitory stage, bidding adieu to its former champions, and waiting for the youngsters to get their full growth. Not since 1918 has a metropolitan man won the national nor since 1915 has the district developed a runner-up. The shadow cast by Davie Herron, with his driving his approaching, and his putting, fails to brighten these same sombre prospects for next season.

Weight For Age Races.

After the experience of this year it is not very likely that the racing associations throughout the country will make any further efforts to revive the interest in weight for age races or such contests in which horses of the same age are required to carry equal weight. At least there will be no further effort to add them as attractions for racing in the Autumn.

Though the weight for age race is the true test of a horse, such events have proved a dismal failure this season. Either competition has been lacking entirely or else the real stars, which should be competing in such events, are missing. The latest of these failures was the Latonia Championship stakes which was run Saturday. This was a race exclusively for three-year-olds in which all starters were required to carry equal weight, the only manner in which a championship could be decided. The race attracted but one high-class performer in a field of seven, and this despite the fact that the $20,000 purse was most alluring. This race followed close upon the heels of the Jockey Club Stakes which was inaugurated at Belmont Park this year and, though having $5,000 added, had only one starter, Purchase, which ran around the course to collect the winner's share.

One reason advanced for the failure of these races to draw better fields is that horsemen will not send their racers against an outstanding star where there is little or no chance of victory. Another reason is that the majority of the best of the racers are retired by this time in the Autumn.

If the weight for age race is to succeed at all it seems that it must be run early in the season, preferably in the Spring, and this would preclude any possibility of calling it a championship contest. However, in the Spring, owners are anxious to try out their thoroughbreds and are willing to let them compete under almost any condition. Also, there are no outstanding stars at that time in the various age divisions, since the champions of the year before are out in new classes. By the time owners have seen their horses perform all season they have found out definitely the worth of each and many which had been named for stake events in the Spring are weeded out as selling platers before Autumn. On the other hand, the ones which do make good are usually at the end of a hard campaign and their owners are not willing to send them in for important events when not at the top of their form.

In the case of the Latonia Championship, it happened that S. C. Hildreth's Mad Hatter, which scored such an easy victory, had been in competition but a short time, having been first raced in September, and was a fresh horse. But other stars, such as Sir Barton, Eternal, and Purchase, which would have made the stake a real championship contest, were either retired or not prepared for the race.

HIGH SCORE IN SOCCER.

Robins Dry Dock Team Defeats Merchants Ship, 11 to 4.

Fifteen goals, the record so far this season, were shot in the soccer match at Todd Field, Brooklyn, between the Robins Dry Dock eleven, now leading in the National Football League, and the team representing the Merchants Ship Football Club of Harriman, Penn., yesterday. The Robins won easily by 11 to 4, after having established a safe lead of 7—2 in the first half. This made the third victory in succession for the victors.

McGuire, inside right for the home team, led in the scoring, getting his five goals all in the first period.

The lineup:

ELLER SENDS HIS ENTRY.

Noted Timber-Topper Will Compete at 47th Regiment Games.

John J. Eller, holder of the 75 yard record for the low hurdles, is the first to enter this event in the big athletic carnival that is to be held under the auspices of the 47th Infantry Athletic Association at the armory of the regiment, Marcy Avenue and Heyward Streets, Brooklyn, on Saturday evening, Nov. 1.

The other events on the program which are open to athletes affiliated with the Amateur Athletic Union are as follows:

100 yard dash, handicap; 75 yard low hurdles, handicap; 1 mile relay, handicap; 2 mile run, handicap; 880 yard run, novice; 600 yard run, handicap; 3 mile bicycle race, and 1 mile walk, handicap.

Events closed to members of the 47th Infantry, New York Guard, are:

Tug of war, 1 mile inter-company relay race, half mile run, squad hike.

Entries close on Saturday, Oct. 25.

MORSE SOCCER TEAM WINS.

Brooklynites Defeat Paterson by 3 to 0—Lynch's Work Features Game

In the final game before meeting the Bethlehem Steel Company's famous team at Morse Oval next Sunday, the soccer team of Morse Dry Dock of Brooklyn journeyed to Paterson, yesterday, and defeated the Paterson Football Club, runners-up to the champions in the National League in last season's cup tie, by the score of 3 goals to 0. At half time the visitors led by 2-0. Lynch, center forward, monopolized the scoring, getting credit for all three of the points.

The lineup:

Morse D.D., (3.)	Position.	Paterson, (0.)
Whalen	G.	Garside
Lindsay	R. B.	Todd
Perrin	R. H.	Broadbent

JOE BOYER WINS AUTO RACE.

Averages 101.69 Miles an Hour Over Cincinnati Speedway.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 12.—Joe Boyer won the world series automobile sweepstakes race of 250 miles at the Cincinnati Speedway this afternoon with an average speed of 101.69 miles an hour. Art Klein finished second, Kurt Hitke was third, Dave Lewis fourth, D. Hickey fifth, and Tom Alley sixth.

Boyer, off to a good start, practically led his field all of the way, and finished an easy winner. From the drop of the flag to the end he never entered the pit on account of trouble or for any reason. Klein made a fine drive, but was unable to overtake Boyer, who obtained a good lead early in the race, and held it throughout.

Although a slippery track threatened trouble in the first few laps, a brisk wind and sunshine quickly dried out the big oval, and the race was not marred by even a minor accident.

TO PLAY MORNING GAMES.

Forenoon, Afternoon, and Evening Matches in Billiard Tourney.

It has been decided to play morning, afternoon, and evening games in the national balkline billiard championship tournament to be held in the grand ballroom at the Hotel Astor, Oct. 20 to 25, inclusive. With Willie Hoppe, Welker Cochran, Young Jake Schaefer, Koji Yamada, George Sutton, Ora Morningstar and George Slosson, seven in all, entered to play for the 18.2 title, it has been found necessary to schedule morning games as well as the customary afternoon and evening matches in order to complete the event in the limited time allowed.

The tourney will start one week from today, and the players have that much more time in which to perfect their strokes for the big event. Slosson will continue his practicing in Boston and will not come to this city before Saturday. Hoppe, Schaefer, Cochran and Yamada have been working here for the past several days and will continue to engage in daily practice matches.

Whether or not Koji Yamada, the little Japanese billiard expert, will be able to repeat his performance of a few years ago and defeat Willie Hoppe when they meet in the championship tournament is one of the most debated questions in the billiard world at this time. Since arriving in this city Yamada has shown marked ability to juggle the ivories. The improvement in his playing is pronounced. His execution is better and his stroke steadier than when he was playing in this city before. Always particularly brilliant at making masse shots, he seems to be more proficient at making the tricky stroke than ever.

Yamada is confidant in his ability to make things hum during the tourney. He appears to have a growing belief that he can take the measure of the Balkline king. He is in better health than he has enjoyed at any time since he was taken ill with influenza last Winter.

"I am playing better billiards than ever before," Yamada insists. "I have more confidence in myself. I know this will be a hard tournament. All of the players who have entered are strong players, and I understand they have been showing good form in their practice games. However, I think I will be able to hold my own."

MURPHY'S WINNINGS ARE FIRST ON LIST

Noted Driver Leads All Other Reinsmen in Season's Harvest of Coin.

All doubt as to Thomas W. Murphy being the leading money winning driver of 1919 was cleared away when he landed the last race at the Lexington meeting with Royal Mack in 2:04¾, with Prince Loree, the Transylvania winner, and Heir Reaper struggling behind him. During the two weeks' stand in the Blue Grass country, he won seven races, Sanardo and Royal Mack being each credited with two, while Direct C. Burnett, Direct um J., and Don de Lopez, which he drove for Geers, each won one, the last named trotting in 2:05¼.

Sanardo reduced his winrace to 2:00¼, and in his second race looked as if he could have beaten 2 minutes over a heavy track if there had been anything to carry him. In his present form, the San Francisco gelding looks like the bright light for the free-for-all events next year.

On the other hand, his stable companion, Direct C. Burnett, after winning in 2:01¼, acted as if he had trained off, and on his second appearance was beaten very easily by Frank Dewey and Grace Direct. The latter also put up a splendid battle with Direct um J. in the Directum Stakes, which he lost by the narrowest of margins, after a terrific stretch drive, in 2:01¾.

Wins 53 Races and $78,049.

The score at Lexington jumped Murphy's winning mounts for the year to 52, and the cash column to $78,049. At one time it looked as if he would gather in the $8,500 first money in the Kentucky Futurity with Brusiloff, as he had two heats, the one in 2:04½ being the fastest made by a three-year-old colt this year, but Dodge succeeded in stalling him off with Periscope, in the fastest five-heat contest ever trotted by foals of that age.

In passing, it can also be added that this is the last three-in-five race that will ever be seen in the Futurity, and it is certainly high time that such horse killers were abolished.

Cox won the two-year-old division of the Kentucky Futurity on the opening day of the meeting with Dayrear, a brother to Brusiloff, in 2:10, after a four-heat contest, the fastest on record, in which Mr. Dudley won the second heat in 2:06¾, and dropped dead in the third, and Natalie the Great burned up a lot of money on which her backers never had a chance to win.

Cox also won a division of the Ashland Purse with McGregor the Great, and landed Jess Y. in front in a class event. His day at the close of the Lexington meeting showed twenty-eight winning races for the season, and a total of $61,723 for the season, with Atlants still to be heard from, while he also reduced Le Princeton's record in a trip against the watch to 2:01, the first heat of the mile being trotted in 59½ seconds.

Great Race of Early Dreams.

McDonald fluttered up to the footlights for the first time this year during the Lexington meeting. On the opening day he won a division of the Walnut Hall Cup with Baron Cegantle in 2:06¾, and followed it on the next day with a marvelous race in which Early Dreams, after a letup of over a year, walked off in front of Charley Rex, Busy's Lassie, Miss Perfection, and Peter June in 2:03¾, 2:03¼, 2:03¾.

In this race the Dream horse made a handful of world's records, the fastest winning heat by a gelding, the fastest by a 11-year-old trotter, and the three fastest heats by a gelding being among them.

Of McDonald's other starters at the meeting, Zomidotte was credited with two firsts and the converted pacer Tommy Direct with one, while Miss Adrienne and Molly Knight in the Kentucky Futurity under a handicap caused by his injuries sustained in an accident at Syracuse, Geers came back and won the Kentucky Stake with her from Abbie Putney in the fourth in 2:07¾ as well as the pacing division of the Futurity with Homefast in 2:07¾. This jumped his winning mounts for the year, notwithstanding his mishap with Heglar, to twenty-one and his winnings to $30,183.

Fred Egan proved a double event winner at Lexington with John Quick in 2:05 and the 2-year-old Peter Volo colt Voltage in 2:11¼. The latter is out of a mare by Brighton, brother to Silika, a Kentucky Futurity winner, as well as the sire of Periscope, that winner of the blue ribbon of the trotting turf this year.

Childs also won two races with Baroness Virginia, while two sets of brackets were placed after Nat Ray's name by General Burlew and Rascal, the latter defeating Aquilla Dillon, Betty Blacklock, and Peter Elliott in 2:03¾.

Flemings Take Several Races.

The members of the Fleming family, which dominates American racing affairs from Hudson Bay to Texas, were very much in evidence at Lexington. Victor, who gets his mail at Dundas, Ontario, during the Winter months and does the most of his racing over the half-mile tracks in Michigan, landed two events with Louie Gratton and gave a few people a scare with Lou Todd, while Herrie, long and slim like all of the race, won a division of the Walnut Hall Cup for Hillandale Farm with Seika in 2:06¾, and chased Edith Carter out in the Ashland Purse with Nedda in 2:07¾ in the mud, and William won a three-year-old race with Kentucky June in 2:11¼ for Forest Park Farm, and gathered in some place money with Julius de Forest and Lucille Harvester.

McDevitt won his second Transylvania with Prince Loree in 2:03¾,

STRENGTH OF LEADING ELEVENS IS INCREASING

COLLEGE ELEVENS MAKING PROGRESS

COLGATE HAS STRONG TEAM

But Bankart Will Need It Against Cornell This Week — Columbia Has Room for Improvement.

With each succeeding Saturday, it is becoming more difficult to pick the winners in the more prominent games of the football world. Last Saturday's games among the Eastern teams produced at least one complete upset and several surprises.

Among the principal surprises was the narrowness of Princeton's escape from defeat by Lafayette. Lafayette in the past has furnished the Orange and Black with one of the warmest arguments on its October schedule, but on Lafayette eleven has come nearer to victory at Princeton than that of the present season. Probably Princeton had expected no such whirlwind attack as that which the Maroon eleven exhibited from the start to the final whistle of the game. It was as even a contest as could well have been staged, and when Roper's charges stopped their opponents by a fine exhibition of defensive play within a foot of a touchdown the relief among Princeton supporters must have been tremendous. However, the game could hardly be called a demonstration of Princeton's weakness so much as of unanticipated strength on the part of Lafayette. Incidentally, Lafayette and Lehigh, which supplied the principal upset of the day by its smashing defeat of Rutgers, should furnish a tidy argument of their own when they meet in their annual classic.

Harvard, playing a more open and varied game than on preceding Saturdays, encouraged its supporters by the smoothness of its attack, by avoidance of fumbling and by its quickness to take advantage of opponents' misplays. Harvard certainly looks strong this Fall. Colby was not able to offer such stout resistance as Brown, despite its defeat by Colgate, should be able to present at the end of this week against Harvard, but the Crimson appears to be a certain winner next Saturday.

Should Have Prevented Touchdown.

The Yale eleven also acquitted itself commendably in its 34 to 7 victory over North Carolina. But the touchdown which the Southerners were able to score should have been prevented. It looked as though the Yale substitutes, who were in the line up at the moment, forgot their rules. The ball, punted by North Carolina, fell among the Yale players and Pharr grabbed it for the Southerners and raced for a touchdown. According to accounts from New Haven the Yale men, forgetting that they had themselves touched the ball, thought that Pharr had no right to touch it. In the case of any such doubt as that the proper thing under any circumstances would have been to tackle the man with the ball and let the referee worry about the legitimacy of the play afterwards. In general, however, Yale played a splendid game. The New Haven team is well fortified in all departments and should measure up to the standard of some of the strongest Eli elevens of the past. The Boston College game this week should further condition it for the severer tests that will come in November.

Cornell outplayed Williams most of the time in their encounter at Ithaca, and Williams has a powerful team this Fall. The margin of victory, a field goal, was slight, but Cornell forced the play to Williams' territory practically all the way. The rival captains, Shiverick and Boynton, both did good work, but Cornell seemed to have the greater ability to keep the brilliant Purple quarter covered than Williams had in the case of Shiverick. But Shiverick's drop-kicking and running ability would not be effective without the stalwart Cornell line to protect it; which, if one were so inclined, might lead back to the old argument as to whether a strong line or a strong backfield is of the greater value to a team. However, one has only to imagine a team with a strong line and mediocre backs playing against a team with good backs and a weak line to get the answer.

Little Opposition for Penn.

The University of Pennsylvania eleven again met an opponent that was unable to give cause for worry. Perhaps Swarthmore will be able to furnish a better line on Penn's real ability this week. Penn, like Cornell, has a star player in its captain. Bell seems to be an exceptionally good field general and, as in Way, the Red and Blue team has a remarkable open-field runner. Penn seems to be playing hard football all the time—hard to a point of roughness, according to the reports of the games in Philadelphia.

Columbia will do well if it is able to hold Williams down next Saturday. Vermont is no weak sister among the college eleven, but Columbia did not show enough scoring power against the Green Mountain eleven Saturday to give supporters any too much confidence as to what can be accomplished against the stronger Williams team.

The Army and Navy teams continued to display the form they had previously exhibited this season, which means, in other words, that, so far as the early-season showing is concerned, the Navy is now a pronounced favorite of the two old rivals. However, many things may happen before the 29th of November. The Army's defeat by the big Syracuse team was not unexpected, but Daly is a resourceful coach, and the Cadets are sure to improve from week to week. The Navy had little opposition from Johns Hopkins.

Bankart Playing True to Form.

Probably most followers of the game had expected Brown to put up a stronger fight against Colgate than was the case Saturday. In fact, the Brunonians showed surprising weakness during a part of the game, and the Colgate backs were able to plough through the line at will. Coach Bankart seems to be playing to form this Fall in the quality of the team he is developing at Hamilton. Bankart will need all his playing strength from now on, however, as Colgate will meet Cornell, Princeton and Dartmouth on the next three Saturdays.

Dartmouth, too, has a hard schedule ahead of it, with games against Penn State, Cornell, Colgate, Pennsylvania and Brown to occupy the remaining Saturdays of the season. In fact, the schedules of college like Colgate, Dartmouth, Brown, Syracuse, &c., have few soft spots on them, once the middle of the season has been reached. Dartmouth played the last of its comparatively easy games on Saturday and came through an extended with a victory over the Massachusetts Aggies. The Green seems to have been sticking pretty consistently to straight football thus far, and on Saturday Coach Spears's men made only two attempts to gain by the forward pass route, being unsuccessful in both instances. Penn State, which defeated Bucknell 9 to 0 on Saturday, should give a real line on Dartmouth's probable standing for the year.

Amherst now has the scalps of two elevens from New York State hanging to its belt, having supplemented its 7 to 6 defeat of New York University with a conquest of the Union eleven by the margin of 5 touchdowns and a field goal. That ancient triangular rivalry among Amherst, Williams and Wesleyan should produce some highly interesting battles later in the season, with present prospects slightly favoring Williams for the ultimate honors. Nevertheless, the supporters of the Wesleyan and Amherst teams have every reason for satisfaction in the showing of their favorites thus far.

Keady's Team Furnishes Upset.

Coach Keady has certainly accomplished wonders with this year's Lehigh eleven. Few had looked for a victory of the Pennsylvanians over Rutgers, and the decisiveness of the Jerseymen's defeat was an especial surprise. Accounts from Bethlehem are that Lehigh got the best of the breaks, but the breaks and the ability to take advantage of them are the essentials of football.

Another surprising turn in Saturday's football battles was supplied by Glenn Warner's University of Pittsburgh team. Many, of course, had picked the Pittsburgh team to win, but few thought that the victory would come in such one-sided fashion as the score of 20 to 0 indicates. West Virginia has had many fine teams in the past, but apparently has not been able to recover its pre-war resources. On the other hand, Warner's eleven gave evidence that it will rank with some of the best that that able coach has developed in other years.

New York University lost another game by a narrow margin Saturday, when it went down to defeat before Hamilton. The Violet eleven was within a foot of a touchdown when the final whistle blew. Three of Hamilton's nine points came through an attempt at a field goal, which seemed doomed to go wide of the bars until the wind unexpectedly changed the direction of the ball and sent it over the corner. Evidently Dame Fortune is not smiling upon N. Y. U. this Fall, for the team also had a streak of hard luck in its 2 to 0 defeat by Amherst.

Washington and Jefferson has shown considerable ability in straight football in its games thus far. Its work against Carnegie Tech, which it defeated 20 to 0, was characterized by greater smoothness of teamwork than in preceding games.

RAIN PUTS TENNIS OFF.

Semi-Finals in Metropolitan Team Tourney Held Over a Week.

Rain caused the postponement of the semi-final team tennis matches of the Metropolitan Association yesterday, and they will be played next Sunday, weather permitting, with the final decision of interclub honors due one week later.

The University Heights Tennis Club, present holder of the championship, meets the West Side Club in the upper semi-final, and the other two contestants for the last bracket are the New York Tennis Club and the Montclair Athletic Club.

Yesterday's rain also interrupted the week-end mixed doubles tournament of the Century Club at White Plains and the concluding rounds of the open tournament on the Notick Courts.

TO SHOW ARABIAN HORSES AT GARDEN

Famous Stock Comes Back to Competition Here After a Lapse of 24 Years.

For the first time in fifteen years there will be a grand exhibit of Arabian horses at the National Horse Show, to be held at the Madison Square Garden Nov. 17 to 21 for the benefit of the Salvation Army, the directors having resolved to turn over a sum equal to the gross proceeds of the five days and nights to the cheery comforters of our boys on the firing line.

Arab horses are little known in New York, although there are a number of three-quarter or half breds that pass along the bridlepaths of Central Park every afternoon that are unknown and unnoticed. For the Arab is the parent stock of many breeds, including the lordly thoroughbred racing machine, the register Kentucky saddle horse, and the standard-bred trotter, the two last named through the thoroughbred.

The great Napoleon recognized their value as chargers, and those who remember the gray horse on which he is mounted in the famous picture, "The Retreat from Moscow," will at the Garden see a duplicate nearly of that magnificent animal when W. R. Brown's Arab mare, Geomaira, is brought into the ring. Mr. Brown, by the way, is now the most important breeder of Arabians in this country, as he recently bought the entire stud of Colonel Spencer Borden at something over $100,000 for the stallions and mares. A small Arab stallion that has taken three first prizes at the famed Crystal Palace show, in England, will also be exhibited among the polo mounts.

In other days Arabs have been exhibited at the National Horse Show, starting at the first, in 1883, when ex-President Grant sent into the ring Leopard and Linden Tree, given to him by the Sultan of Turkey. In 1893 the late Randolph Huntington exhibited a number of Arabs, both pure blooded and also crossed with the standard-bred trotter, and later still Homer Davenport, the artist, showed the Arabs which he personally entered the desert to obtain. This was in 1905, and since that time no full-blooded Arabians have appeared at the National Horse Show.

Scureman's Broken Leg Will Keep Him Out of Football for Season.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 12.—Murray Scureman, Princeton's Varsity centre, will be out of the game for the remainder of the season, it was announced today. Scureman was injured while attempting to break up a Lafayette formation in Saturday's game. He was borne from the field on a stretcher and carried to the McCosh Infirmary, where examination revealed a clean break of the leg.

Scureman's injury will be a serious blow to Bill Roper. Scureman started both the Trinity and Lafayette contests and has been the Varsity centre so far. Substitute material for the pivot position has been weak and the coaches now have a new problem on their hands.

Statistics compiled from Saturday's game show that in only one respect did the Tigers outshine their opponents. Lourie and Trimble got away eight punts for an average of 45 yards, while the Lafayette kickers averaged 40. Lafayette led the Tigers in ground gained by line plays by 100 yards to 80, while Captain Weldon circled the Orange and Black wing men for over 40 yards during the contest.

Eight first downs went to the credit of the Pennsylvanians against one for the Tigers. Both elevens lost 55 yards by penalties and fumbled three times.

Campbell to Captain Freshmen.

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 12.—Thomas Campbell of Chicago tonight was elected Captain of the freshman cross-country team at Yale University. Campbell holds the world's record of 1:13 1-5 for the 600-yard indoor run.

"—here's just the thing for that Sore Throat"

THE throat is the first danger spot reached by germs. And once irritation is started, there is danger that the bacilli of tonsillitis, or even more malignant diseases, influenza for instance, may gain the upperhand. For the tender tissues are easily broken into by the invading germs.

So it is wisdom not to neglect sore throat. Science has given us, in Formamint, a most effective means of dealing with throat germs. Little tablets — delightful in taste — convenience itself to have with you, they free in the saliva an active, yet harmless, germicide that reduces the germ colonies and thus quickly promotes healing of the irritated tissues.

Over 5,000 American physicians endorse Formamint and strongly advise its use not only when sore throat exists, but as a means of forestalling germ invasion.

OLD EGYPT
TURKISH CIGARETTES

There's nothing Mysterious about "Old Egypt" Cigarettes.

The Simple Fact is that "Old Egypt" is the best cigarette ever sold in a cup package in America.

Why is "Old Egypt" the best cigarette?

Because it is being manufactured by experts—life-long experts—and from 100% pure Turkish tobacco. And there is no other tobacco that grows out of the earth that is equal to Turkish tobacco for cigarettes.

Nothing mysterious about that, is there?

Put your ear to the ground right here!

No manufacturer ever improved 100% pure Turkish tobacco by mixing some other tobacco with it. The only thing he accomplishes is to cheapen his cigarette at the Expense of Quality—and he knows it. And when you smoke it, you know it!!

The 100% pure Turkish tobacco in your "Old Egypt" is exactly the same idea as the 100 cents in your dollar.

Nothing mysterious about that, is there?

Now don't forget this—

"Old Egypt" is an ECONOMICAL cigarette.

Why?

Because it combines Quality and Quantity at an inexpensive Price—and we invite you to compare it—test it—judge it—and decide for yourself.

Another Point, please—

Ask any dealer what his customers say about "Old Egypt."

WALKER AND NEWTON REACH STATEN ISLAND GOLF FINAL

WALKER WILL MEET NEWTON FOR TITLE

Golfers Reach Final Round of Staten Island's Championship Tournament.

NEWMAN DEFEATS PERRY

Clubmate Conquers the Fox Hills Champion in Surprising Match of Tourney.

Facing a hard rain, driven by a strong wind, which made good golf almost impossible, A. L. Walker, Jr., and F. C. Newton yesterday advanced through the second and semi-final rounds of the Staten Island championship tournament, and today will meet in the thirty-six-hole final for the Island title. The Richmond County Country Club links yesterday was a mass of pools and SOGGY places, yet the competitors in the championship flight and in the second and third sixteens turned out in force and continued to play toward the finals.

Walker, the young Columbia student and present intercollegiate golf champion, is fighting this Fall for his former crown of Staten Island titleholder, and Newton is striving to maintain the excellent brand of golf he showed Saturday in winning the qualifying medal. Playing in the second round yesterday, Newton eliminated H. Miller-Jones, a Richmond County clubmate, by the wide margin of 6 and 5, and Walker had even an easier match in putting out N. F. Griffin, also of Richmond County, by 7 and 5. In the semi-finals, Newton defeated J. D. Newman of Fox Hills by 5 and 4, and Walker took the measure of Courtland Van Clief of Richmond County by 7 and 6.

Perry's Defeat a Surprise.

The elimination of A. C. Perry yesterday in the second round crushed the hopes of the rival golfers from the Fox Hills Country Club, who had hoped to bring the Staten Island crown to their organization. Nothing more surprising could be imagined than Perry's defeat at the hands of Newman, his clubmate, by the score of 2 and 1. Perry has been a consistently strong golfer throughout this season and holds undisputed claim to the Fox Hills Club championship.

In the second sixteen W. G. Cooper of Fox Hills and H. Walser of Richmond County will be the finalists today.

Walker's two rounds yesterday were exceptional. Playing always in the rain and trying to putt on soggy, slow greens, he made an approximate 75 in the morning against Griffen. In the afternoon he even eclipsed this brilliant work by making the first nine holes in 34, one stroke under the rather rigid par figures for the Richmond County links. Walker opened up his round with Van Clief by taking a birdie 2 on the first hole, and he turned for home after two other birdies, one at the long fifth and one at the short par 3 ninth, which he negotiated in two strokes. He dropped back only at the second and fourth, taking each of these in a single stroke above par.

The afternoon card compared to par follows:

Out—
Walker	2	5	3	5	4	3	4	6	2	—34
Par	3	4	3	4	5	3	4	6	3	—35
In—
Walker	5	4	4	5
Par	4	4	4	5

Van Clief's Remarkable Play.

One of the remarkable feats yesterday was performed by W. S. Van Clief, the senior member of the prominent Staten Island golfing family and a man more than 60 years of age. He was eliminated in the first round match on Saturday by Perry, but yesterday, playing in the beaten eight of the championship flight, he not only defeated Waddell Catching, by 2 and 1, but turned in a score of 80 for the course, despite the pouring rain and all-around poor golfing conditions.

Play for the Staten Island title will begin this morning at 9 o'clock and will be at thirty-six holes, eighteen before and after lunch. Yesterday's scores follow:

First Sixteen.

SECOND ROUND.—F. C. Newton, Richmond County, defeated H. Miller-Jones, Richmond County, 6 and 5; J. D. Newman, Fox Hills, defeated A. C. Perry, Fox Hills, 2 and 1; A. L. Walker, Jr., Richmond County, defeated N. F. Griffin, Richmond County, 7 and 5; C. Van Clief, Richmond County, defeated B. T. Allen, Fox Hills, 2 and 1.

SEMI-FINAL ROUND.—Newton defeated Newman, 5 and 4; Walker defeated Van Clief, 7 and 6.

Second Sixteen

SECOND ROUND.—W. G. Cooper, Fox Hills, defeated B. S. Bottone, Fox Hills, 1 up; W. C. Van Clief, Richmond County, defeated K. Twining, Richmond County, 1 up; H. Walser, Richmond County, defeated T. W. Tannock, Fox Hills, 4 and 3; P. S. Russell, Richmond County, defeated J. Henry Slater, Fox Hills, 5 and 4.

SEMI-FINAL ROUND.—Cooper defeated Van Clief, 3 and 2; Walser defeated Russell, 1 up.

PROS TIE IN FOURSOME.

Quartet Plays Fine Golf at Great Neck, Despite Wind and Rain.

A quartet of golf professionals braved the rainstorm yesterday at Great Neck to provide high-class competition in a best-ball foursome, which ended happily for all concerned. George McLean of the home club and Gil Nicholls, unattached, had Mike Brady of Oakley and George Bowden of Commonwealth, 3 up at the sixth hole, but such prosperity was too much and the Massachusetts pair succeeded in cutting this down to all square, finally went to 1 up, but dropped back to even terms at the home hole when Gil Nicholls took a birdie 2 for a win.

Both pairs had bad balls of 38, but Brady and Bowden had to employ every bit of their golf ability to save off a defeat that seemed certain. They got a bad start, losing to McLean and Nicholls at the first hole by four strokes to five, and again lost by the same figures at the third. The New Yorkers took a third hole, the sixth, but Brady and Bowden pared off this margin by winning the eighths 4 to 5, and they rounded the turn still 3 down.

Coming toward the club house, brilliant exhibitions of putting were furnished by each pair, despite the rain and wind, which almost made sure golf impossible. The Bay Staters won the eleventh, three to four, and squared the match when Bowden took a birdie 2 at the fifteenth. Brady and Bowden went in the lead for the first time at the sixteenth, winning by four strokes to five. When the two pairs halved the seventeenth in 3s, the victory for the visitors seemed sure, but they had not reckoned on George McLean nor on his knowledge of his home course. He drove to the home green, his ball rolling to within 25 feet of the flag, and from this point he sank the putt for a birdie 2, winning the hole and squaring the match. The play-off was not attempted.

The best ball cards follow:

Out—
McLean and Nichols	4	3	5	4	4	3	5	4	—36
Brady and Bowden	5	3	5	4	4	4	4	4	—36
In—
McLean and Nichols	4	4	5	4	4	5	5	3	—34	70
Brady and Bowden	4	3	5	4	4	4	4	5	—33	69

Bowden had the low individual score, making a 70 for the round, with a 32 for the last nine holes. McLean had a 75, Brady took a 76, and Nicholls a 77.

N. Y. A. C. TO STAGE BOUTS.

Will Hold Tournament for Amateur Boxers in Four Classes.

Another amateur boxing tournament will be held by the New York Athletic Club in its gymnasium on Central Park South, beginning Thursday evening, Oct. 30. The final bouts will take place on Saturday evening, Nov. 1. The contestants will be classed at weights of 112, 122, 130, and 158 pounds, with novice classes at 108 and 140 pounds. Gold watches and seal rings will be awarded as prizes, with miniature figures of boxers as souvenirs to the losers in the semi-finals. Entries close with Paul H. Pilgrim at the New York A. C. on Monday, Oct. 27.

The tournament will be open to all registered athletes of the Amateur Athletic Union, the rules of which will govern the contests.

HERMAN MEETS FARESE.

Featherweights Head All-Star Bill in Newark Ring Tonight.

Thirty-eight rounds of boxing will be served to the fans at the Newark Sportsmen's Club in the Fifth Regiment Armory in Newark tonight. Every class except the middleweight will be represented. Heavyweights, lightweights, featherweights and bantamweights are on the program.

In the final bout of the evening, Pete Herman, bantamweight champion of the world, will tackle Harold Farese, of Newark. Herman is anxious to show local fans that he is a great champion. The New Orleans lad has never fought in Newark, and he declared yesterday that he is anxious to eradicate the opinion that he might be lacking in any of the essentials of a real world's champion. In Farese, Herman will meet one of the toughest of the present day bantams. The Newark lad has been showing great form in his training bouts at Ocean, N. J., where he put the finishing touches to his preparation for the bout.

In the heavyweight division, Al Roberts of Staten Island, the knockout king, who has a record of seventeen knockouts in twenty battles, will meet Charlie Weinert of Newark, one of the two men who have been able to go the limit with him. Roberts has trained hard for this battle, and Weinert also has put in an extra amount of work in preparation for his clash with Roberts. The Newark heavyweight went some time ago to the Orange Mountains, where he put in some strenuous work and even gained weight despite his hard training. He reports himself in excellent condition, and declares he will have no excuses to offer if he doesn't beat Roberts.

The featherweight bout will bring together Benny Valgen and Frankie Brown. Willie Jackson and Tommy Touhey are the lightweights on the card. A six-round preliminary will open the show, all the other bouts being eight-round affairs.

Quantity Production

The fundamental reason for America's conquest of world markets is quantity production. That it is possible to produce a quality product on a quantity basis is a truism nailed down and demonstrated by the war. Liberty Motors are an example.

There will be more Bethlehem Motor Trucks exported during the coming year than any manufacturer whose truck sells for six thousand dollars will build. Two thousand to England alone. Another triumph for quantity production. Bethlehem Motor Trucks are neither underbuilt to meet a price nor overbuilt to justify a price. The enormous number of Bethlehems built in a year means a low production cost, a low sales cost and a low list price. Bethlehem Motor Trucks are willing to be judged as all motor trucks should be judged—on their ability to transport and the cost per ton mile of that transportation. Buy your Motor Truck on Facts.

THE LABOR CONFERENCE.

It would be a public misfortune if the Labor Conference should come to an end without adding something to the nation's hope that it may bring about better understanding between those who pay wages and those who receive them. The Conference will be successful, we suppose, in proportion that it refrains from any attempt to create a new heaven and a new earth; in proportion that it disposes of insuperable obstacles to present agreement in the spirit shown by the makers of the Federal Constitution, who would have failed altogether had they attempted to settle all the controverted questions which came before them; and in proportion that both wage payers and wage earners come to a clearer understanding that the interest of the public in labor controversies is greater than any private interest.

Mr. GOMPERS has asked for the appointment of a committee to arbitrate the questions at issue in the steel strike, thereby giving rise to a difference of opinion so sharp that it threatens to defeat the purpose of the Conference. His resolution is construed as an effort to save the Federation of Labor and to save Mr. GOMPERS. Is it not in a very high degree probable that that double work of salvation could be better accomplished in another way? Is it not, in fact, probable that the acceptance of Mr. GOMPERS'S proposal would be about the worst thing that could happen for himself and for the Federation?

The movement for the steel strike was initiated by the radical element of labor which Mr. GOMPERS has been fighting nearly all his life. The strike was ordered for no good and sufficient reason; from the beginning it had no sympathy from the public, which saw at once that it was not called with the sincere purpose of bettering the conditions of labor in the steel industry, but with the intent to control that industry. That was made plain by the utterances and the record of the two responsible leaders of the movement, Mr. FITZPATRICK and Mr. FOSTER. The strike has failed. In the Pittsburgh region, at Youngstown, and at Gary the men are returning to work. The foreign element, men who, as the members of the Kenyon committee have discovered, are not naturalized, many of whom do not speak English, constitutes the great body of the strikers. It is these men, among whom the principles of radicalism have struck their roots deepest, who have given to the strike whatever appearance of success it has had at any time. General LEONARD WOOD, now in command at Gary, has issued an official statement in which he says:

> The gravity of the situation at Gary is found in the presence of a dangerous and extremely active group of I. W. W. and red anarchistic elements which are striving to bring about extensive disturbances against law and order. These elements are working against everything which this country stands for.

The appointment by the Labor Conference of a committee of mediation would inspire the radicals among the strikers with the belief that they had succeeded. It is unquestionably true now that they have failed. Would it be wise by such a move to transform their failure into success, or into what the leaders of these ignorant men would make them believe was success, a veritable triumph? We are convinced that the American public would regard such a step as unwise and deplorable.

It would be an ill augury for the American Federation of Labor and for the standing and influence of Mr. SAMUEL GOMPERS if the radical leaders in the steel strike, men who believe in the socialization of industry, in taking the factories out of the hands of their owners and putting them into the control of the men employed, should be led to believe that they have won a strike ordered with that intent. Mr. GOMPERS and the American Federation of Labor may have careers of great usefulness to labor and to the community in the future, as they have had in the past, but mediation of a strike that never should have been begun, which has already been lost by a committee appointed by the Washington Conference is not the way to assure the continuance of their usefulness.

SOBER SECOND THOUGHT.

Sober second thought seems to be making headway among the striking longshoremen who have any regard for the integrity of their organization. The radicals in their ranks, while vociferous, are utterly irresponsible. There is no doubt that the strike was brought about by emissaries of the I. W. W., which seeks to capture the American Federation of Labor and make an end of every decent union, with the purpose of destroying the Government. An agreement such as that made between the Longshoremen's Association and the National Adjustment Commission is a scrap of paper to the I. W. W., to be torn up at will. The interests of the consumers, common humanity in fact, are nothing to these conspirators. If a whole city starves, that is nothing. Unfortunately, they tempted and seduced the striking longshoremen, after reviling and lying about their elected leaders, to be just as cynical about the sanctity of a contract, just as callous to human suffering in the community. Many of the strikers, an increasing number of them apparently, are beginning to see that the I. W. W. agents are their enemies, not their friends; that it will pay to stand by their own leaders and keep faith with the National Adjustment Commission, which promises that if they return to work on the terms offered them the question of further increases will be taken up by the commission on Dec. 1.

The striking longshoremen must choose between an honest and brave man like their President, THOMAS V. O'CONNOR, and the pro-German radical whom he denounced at the meeting with the Adjustment Commission on Saturday as a fomenter of strikes among the longshoremen for five years and as a plotter against not only their leaders but the patriotism of longshoremen loading ships during the war. It should not be difficult for self-respecting men to decide whom to follow and whom to trust. Nor should it be difficult for the striking longshoremen to understand that they cannot win with the whole community, threatened with starvation and knowing where the bad faith lies, arrayed against them. With common sense making itself felt, a settlement on the basis of further consideration of the wage scale on Dec. 1 should not be far off.

THE WAR BEGINS AGAIN.

We shall be fortunate if the historian of the twenty-first century does not say that the German attack on Riga was the beginning of the second part of the great war whose first phase was ended with the armistice of November, 1918. Certainly it is the beginning of a new German war for supremacy, an attempt to seize the hegemony of Europe for that Prussian landholding aristocracy which is dominated by mediæval ideals of aristocratic militarism and inflamed by a fanatical religion. VON DER GOLTZ'S army is officered by the sort of men who made Germany hated the world over; it is fighting for the moment in the interest chiefly of the land-owning nobility of the Baltic coast; but its victory will bring an end to what feeble beginnings of moderation, sanity, and liberalism have appeared in Germany, and will give over Northeastern Europe to the domination of the iron cross.

VON DER GOLTZ'S Germans are operating against the Letts along with the troops of an organization calling itself "the West Russian Government." This Government appears to represent nothing but the Baltic German barons—the most reactionary class in old Russia, the men who furnished most of the traitors to betray the Russian armies to Germany in the early years of the war, the men who have misruled the Lettish and Esthonian and Lithuanian peasantry until their lives depend on German aid. Many if not most of the officers and soldiers of this army have come direct from the German divisions demobilized since the armistice. The "West Russian Government," that is to say, represents exactly the same interests as VON DER GOLTZ—the interests of the fighting German barons of the Baltic coast.

So the "West Russians"—not to be confused with the Northwest Russian Government, whose army, under General YUDENITCH, is co-operating with KOLCHAK and DENIKIN—are helping the Germans in the campaign against the Letts. Riga is to the new war what Belgrade and Liége were to the other; the Letts are victims of the first attack as were the Serbs and Belgians five years ago. The Letts are far away, and few people are interested in their fate; but the war that began with an attack on Serbia spread all over the world. It is far from impossible that the war begun at Riga will spread much further before it ends.

If the Lettish and Esthonian Governments are overrun, as apparently they will be by the more numerous and better equipped armies of VON DER GOLTZ, most of the Baltic coast will belong to Germany. The Germans are already talking of seizing the "free city of Danzig," as D'ANNUNZIO seized Fiume. In that case YUDENITCH will be caught between the Germans and the Bolsheviki. VON DER GOLTZ stayed in the Baltic on the pretense of holding back the Bolsheviki, though all his fighting was done against his enemies. Recent reports have forecast a possible alliance, or at least an understanding, between the German Baltic troops and the armies of TROTSKY. The two parties are diametrically opposed in their political ideas, but both are endangered by the same enemies. Popular governments in the Baltic States are dangerous to both; above all, a free and strong Poland is dangerous to both. Co-operation between TROTSKY and VON DER GOLTZ, with the Baltic coast surrendered to the Germans in return for help against the Poles, is a logical development of the present situation in Russia.

In that event the Polish armies that have beaten the Bolsheviki would be taken in the rear; Poland and Lithuania would fall; and the German armies on the Baltic would have won an empire that could make Germany laugh at the loss of Alsace-Lorraine. The gross on the Baltic is still a powerful idea in Germany, and a military aristocracy which had so brilliantly retrieved the losses of the earlier phase of the war would have no trouble in putting the HOHENZOLLERNS back on the throne at its pleasure.

It is too late to lament the fear of Bolshevism which allowed the allied leaders to consent to the retention of these German troops on the Baltic. They did us no service while they remained; they helped rather than hindered the Bolsheviki; yet with this fact evident, and with Bolshevism declining in power, there were men who up to the very sound of the first guns fired at Riga were unwilling to demand the withdrawal of these troops for fear of Bolshevism. Those who have learned seem to have learned too late; VON DER GOLTZ laughs at FOCH and his ultimatum; while semi-official German statements were assuring us that the withdrawal from the Baltic had already begun, VON DER GOLTZ'S armies were moving on the trenches before Riga. It would seem now that it will take an army to get him out. The Polish army has fought the battles of Western civilization against the Bolsheviki, and will find it hard to reconcentrate on another front. The German Republic may have both the will and the power to stop VON DER GOLTZ, but as yet it has shown little of either; and allied peoples have demanded the demobilization of their armies, and got it, because the war seemed to be over. Ultimate victory—and German annexation of the Baltic coast guaranteed by the destruction of Poland would be a victory very nearly as great as the establishment of Mitteleurope—will naturally fall to the army which stayed in the field after its enemies went home.

CALIFORNIA FOR THE LEAGUE.

Exactly what is Senator HIRAM WARREN JOHNSON gaining by his motion and emotion against the League of Nations? He invaded the West with a mighty sound of trumps and drums. Republican candidate for President, miscellaneous independent candidate, he was sure of slaying the League and reaping the reward. In his California, the State whose hero and idol he was in 1916, the position he takes has been denounced. Proof after proof has been published of the falling-away of old friends, of the hopelessness of his rage against the Treaty, whose ratification Republicans of California generally demand. Mr. CROTHERS, editor of The Bulletin of San Francisco, Mr. JOHNSON'S "home town," furnishes a new and long list of friends of the League of Nations. He reports that test votes, in various parts of the State, of Chambers of Commerce, universities, and other organizations "show "that the people are at least 5 to 1 "for it." Forty-four of forty-eight Presidents of Parent Teachers' Associations, associations of mothers in seven northern counties, the Congress of Mothers, representing 26,000 women, "many of whom sent sons to the war"; the Lay Ministerial Conference of Los Angeles, with 85,000 members; many Republican newspapers all over the State, the Labor Councils of Los Angeles and San Francisco, many soldiers of the war, have declared themselves strongly in favor of the League.

It is the state of old friends, supporters, intimates that hurt the most. Twenty members of Mr. JOHNSON'S Los Angeles Reception Committee resigned from it on account of his hostility to the League of Nations. Assemblymen, Senators, Judges, the Speaker of the House were among these "signers-off." Mr. CHESTER H. ROWELL, editor of The Fresno Republican, long a devout Johnsonite, earnestly supports the League.

Labor, business, education, politics, old Republicans, Progressives that were, men, women, are among the anti-Johnsonians. Senator JOHNSON has grievously misjudged the California feeling in regard to the League.

What becomes of a candidate for a Presidential nomination who loses his State nine months before the national conventions? The case of HIRAM JOHNSON should be a warning to his Senatorial associates in the dangerous art of thwarting the popular will.

THE CITY'S BUDGET.

As yet there is only danger of a $300,000,000 city budget; and the alarm is given in time to make that threat futile. The present prospect is for an increase this year of four times last year's increase, or around fifty million dollars. An increase of the budget by scores of millions, by an administration elected on a pledge of economy, and now in the middle of its term, is mockery of the voters. There is no ground of reproach on the increases of pay to city employés so far as they are earned, and are to be attributed to causes beyond control, such as the increase in the cost of living due to the war. But the administration itself is responsible for the idea that the city does not need all its 60,000 employés, and that the services of some of them could be dispensed with. The city, like the State and nation, is overstaffed by reason of duplication of necessary duties and the invention of unnecessary duties to take up salary money. If the reorganization of the personnel offset the increases of salary in any considerable degree, there would be a better feeling about one of the chief causes of the budget increase.

Last year, as this year, the greatest increase in the city's expenses was due to the Department of Education. There is no more popular demand for city money, but an increase of $87,051,081 following an increase of $9,730,658—an addition of $100,000,000 almost in this single item in two years—makes a heavy demand on popular sentiment. Also like last year, the education budget accounts for about the total addition to the budget, and there is no alleviation in the fact that the increase is about twice the amount which is mandatory under the State's laws for the city. No doubt additional buildings are necessary in a way, and underconstruction is objectionable. But there is a middle course in the more intensive use of existing buildings, by alterations of school hours, part time classes, and other expedients. It is laudable to try to overtake the increase of scholars by building increase, but there is no particular demand for that this year, and there is an impression that the school buildings are not made so useful as they might be.

There is now pending before the Court of Appeals a suit to decide whether education is a State function, as the Appellate Division already has decided. The reason for mentioning this in connection with the budget is that the constitutional limit on the tax rate applies only to city and county purposes. If education is a State function, there is no constitutional limit to the bonds which may be issued for school purposes, or to the tax rate necessary to pay their interest. The city's credit is based on the constitutional limit of the tax rate to 2 per cent. If the increased budget and the decision on appeal in the above case together carried the tax rate of 8 per cent. or more, there would be a blow to the city's credit as well as to the city's taxpayers.

There is uncertainty about the tax rate this year, due to doubt to what extent the new income tax will replace the personal property tax. The income tax is a better reliance, but it will burden city taxpayers disproportionately with the country districts, and no one knows exactly how much of the personal property tax will be collected under the new conditions. It is understood that the income tax is being construed as practically annulling the secured debt tax, although it was not formally repealed. That is to say, no one can secure immunity from the income tax by paying the secured debt tax on any securities from which income is derived.

Clearly that is an option whose value depends on the yield from the securities, and specific conditions must decide whether the State will benefit by the income tax or the taxpayer could save by paying the secured debt tax, if the administration allowed the option. But this is a year of many receiverships, and there are many secured debts which are not yielding any income. If income is the test of the application of the income tax, then the repeal of the secured debt tax would leave such securities subject to the personal property tax, and the unfortunate owner would seem to be punished for the errors of his investment, as well as for the possession of such property.

AMERICA AND JAPAN.

At a meeting in Tokio Baron SAKATANI, Financial Adviser to China, spoke of the frequent introduction of anti-Japanese bills in the California Legislature as a cause of irritation in Japan against the United States. Between great nations, with widely diversified interests and numerous points of contact and competition, causes of irritation are seldom wanting. It is the habit of friendly countries, like Japan and the United States, to stress the causes of good relations and good feeling, not those of irritation.

For instance, reports and rumors of Japanese military purposes, manners, and policy in Siberia were of a nature to produce, and may have produced, in the United States a certain amount of irritation against Japan, or against military-bureaucratic Japan. But Americans of sense are not eager to believe everything they hear, or to dwell too much, especially in the present situation of the world, even upon official information that might be interpreted not wholly to the advantage of the Government, or agents of the Government, of a nation with which they have long maintained, and hope permanently to maintain, good relations.

The Federal Government has no power or control over the California Legislature. If there have been divisions or clashes of aims and policies, military or political, between Japan and the United States in Eastern Siberia, if the Japanese contingent was or remains, even after reduction, disproportionately large; if any Japanese Generals have favored the Cossack chiefs opposed to the cause that Japan is supposed to support, it must be because the Imperial Government is not able to exercise, in a disturbed region and at some distance, that rigid control of the Japanese Generals which would insure the spirit of co-operation with the Allies and the exact performance of agreements which it desires. The endless crop of international irritations and counter-irritations will be regarded with tolerance by the philosopher. The politician is often a different being.

GENERAL BARRY'S RETIREMENT.

After forty-two years of service in the regular army, Major Gen. THOMAS H. BARRY, a native of this city, is retired today by operation of law, having reached the age of sixty-four. Born on the east side, educated in the public schools and at the College of the City of New York before entering the Military Academy at West Point, it was General BARRY'S good fortune to complete his long term of service as commander once more of the Eastern Department at Governors Island. In this city he has always had troops of friends who have followed his career with the feeling that he would do honor to old New York. He was never quite contented away from the associations of his youth and early manhood. If New York was proud of him, he was proud of his connection with New York. He liked to be in touch with the city. After commanding the army of the second occupation in Cuba for two years, he accepted the post of Superintendent of the Military Academy, although holding the rank of Major General. It was an inspiration to the cadets to be under the eye of such a distinguished officer, one, too, who looked the part, for there was no more soldierly figure in the army; and the General's work at West Point was of marked benefit to the academy.

General BARRY was President ROOSEVELT'S choice for the difficult assignment in Cuba beginning in April, 1907. As a staff and field officer he had attracted Mr. ROOSEVELT'S notice. TOM BARRY, as he was called in the army, had been an efficient Assistant Adjutant General at various times, had commanded a brigade in the China relief expedition, and his record in the Philippines was excellent. By his superiors he was held in high regard. In Cuba a diplomat as well as a soldier would be needed; the soldier would have to be a disciplinarian and at the same time understand the human side of the American soldier; the diplomat would have to get on with the civil government and divide responsibility with Governor MAGOON. Occupation included pacification, and an essential was harmony at all times between the Cubans and the American soldiers, who were not welcome.

It is General BARRY'S greatest distinction that his success was flawless. He was well liked by the Cuban authorities; his relations with the American Provisional Governor were harmonious. To make a high-strung people and the American doughboys dwell together in amity taxed his adroitness. Although there were jars and episodes, never heard of in the States, the army of occupation was molded into tolerance and the Cubans were reconciled to its presence. During the war in Europe General BARRY, like J. FRANKLIN BELL and LEONARD WOOD, rendered invaluable service by training National Army divisions for the field. It must have been a keen disappointment to BARRY to have to do his bit at home, but he was always a good soldier. While it is a strain at the heart-strings for the General to say farewell to army life, there will be consolation for him in the warm welcome he will receive from the people in his home city, who hold him in affection and esteem.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Royalty Among Democrats.

Among the minor reasons why the journey of King ALBERT across the continent has brought to every station where he has stopped—and to many where he didn't—a crowd of people eager to get even a glimpse of him, and delighted if the glimpse extended into a good look, is presumably the reason that soon after he arrived in this country it became evident that, even when judged as other men are judged, he meets all tests and does not have to depend on his royal station for attracting attention and commanding respect. He showed at once that he takes himself seriously, but not too seriously—that he has no illusions as to his relation to ordinary humanity, and that in a democratic land he is not shocked, surprised, or annoyed by the occasional differences he encounters between its customs and those to which he has been accustomed.

Theoretically, a King, as such, has antagonism if not hostility to meet in the United States; this feeling has found expression, two or three times, since King ALBERT came here, but, curiously enough, it always has come from Americans whose Americanism is of the recent and dubious sort, while those of the older stocks have shown not a trace of it. On the other hand, a King here, as everywhere else, for that matter, has an advantage over other men in that acts of ordinary kindness and affability—acts that would get the other men no credit whatever—for him count heavily.

This may be due to an ineradicable element of snobbishness common to the human race, and, on analysis, it hints that in the past and as a rule kings have been marked by the opposite traits of cruelty and arrogance. There is more to it than that, however, and a part of the more may be subconscious recognition that the human being who has power without misusing it, and lofty station without presuming on it, really is of uncommon merit.

Utilizing Special Privileges.

Out West King ALBERT seems to have made himself even more liked than in this part of the country. That is due, probably, not to special efforts on his part to win favor there, but simply to the fact that he had been brought closer in the West to unofficial, every-day folk than he was while most of his time was devoted to formal exercises and receptions.

That the King and the young Prince have ridden in locomotives several times and colloqued familiarly with engineers and firemen is nothing except an indication that they have utilised a special privilege accorded to distinguished guests. Most other fathers and sons on the same journey would have done the same thing, if the sternest of railway rules had been broken for them, and would have enjoyed the experience quite as much. The cab of a locomotive is not a particularly comfortable place, but it is an extremely interesting one when briefly visited.

It is significant and a little amusing that "decorations" were accepted from the royal hands with no signs of reluctance or hesitation by the King's engine companions. They quite forgot to scoff at the "baubles" given to them. Their pride in democracy took the better form of meeting courtesy with courtesy and of putting a proper value on a symbol of friendliness and good-will.

Criticism of the Police.

Whether political motives and animosity to the HYLAN administration had anything to do with the Citizens Union's recent criticism of the Police Department is a question which that organization is quite competent to answer for itself. But as Commissioner ENRIGHT, in writing to the Mayor, refers to "a number of newspapers" as having "for some time been carrying on a propaganda in a desperate effort to destroy confidence in the department and break down the morale of the force," it behooved him, if he could, to name the journals that have been doing what he charged.

It is to be more than suspected that he would fail to maintain his indictment against any of them. No New York newspaper has any imaginable motive for finding fault with the Police Department—none, that is, except the desire to make it better—and all of them, so far as can be recalled, have gladly utilised every opportunity provided by current events to publish and praise the achievements of the police, their courage and their intelligence. Certainly THE TIMES has done so again and again and yet again, and certainly it would be delighted if it never had reason for doing anything else. Of enmity to Commissioner ENRIGHT it has not a trace, but it feels no obligation to withhold criticism it thinks deserved. Its desire is to increase confidence in the force, not to destroy it, and the lowering of the morale of the force is what it earnestly and sincerely tries to prevent.

The Commissioner sees as enemies those who want to be his friends, as detractors those who know the value of his long experience and would be entirely content if he displayed the efficiency that ought to result from that experience.

Everybody Wants to Know.

With the Senate's eager desire to find out just why there was such a sudden termination of the proceedings instituted in France against ROBERT A. MINOR, the friends as well as the enemies of the Wilson Administration are warmly sympathetic. Its friends, unlike its enemies, are willing to withhold judgment in the matter till the facts are known, and if it were cleared up satisfactorily they would be pleased instead of disappointed, but the mystery of that strange affair troubles and disquiets them.

The prima facie case against MINOR, as revealed in the dispatches from France before the censorship shut down, was strong and clear—certainly strong and clear enough to justify putting him on trial for his liberty, if not for his life. And he was not tried—he was set at liberty for reasons to this day undisclosed and as the result of influences exerted from quarters as yet unknown.

The man's behavior since his return to this country has not been such as to inspire the belief, or even to suggest, that accusations of seditious activity made against him abroad were false. He has kept the worst of company and he has not hesitated to make public proclamation of his affiliations with and admiration for the enemies of the American Government and of all others organized along the lines which with some claim to truth are called civilized.

What he does in time of peace he presumably did in time of war, but nothing happened to him then and nothing happens to him now. His immunities, past and present, constitute a problem that ought to be solved.

IN MID-OCTOBER.

'Tis mid-October now; the far horizon
At dawn is hidden by a veil of cold,
And yet at noon 'tis cure to feast our eyes on
The lavish linden-gold.

'Tis mid-October now; the woodland porches
Are filled with music by the cricket choir,
While overhead are lighted the tall torches
Of crimson maple fire.

'Tis mid-October now, and wild geese wingings
In a wide wedge drop down behind the hills,
And at the twilight's edge there is the singings
Of haunting whippoorwills.

'Tis mid-October now; as though in dreamings
Of Summer gone the wind its flute attunes,
And 'mid the orchard boughs there is the gleamings
Of ripened pippin moons.

'Tis mid-October now; erelong December's
Arrows of ice will strike with bitter sting,
And yet we have for warmth of heart the embers
Of the remembered Spring!

THE CLASSIC REVIVAL.

Cincinnati Sets Example in Providing for a General Education.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Greek has been restored to the curriculum of the Montclair (N. J.) High School, and a large increase in the Latin enrolment is reported from the Scott High School in Toledo, Ohio, and from the Germantown High School in Philadelphia. So far so good. Still better news comes from Cincinnati, where, after two years of preparation, the city has established a six-year classical high school in Walnut Hills, with provision for from eight hundred to one thousand pupils. The curriculum will be based mainly on training in the classics, history, mathematics, and the sciences. "The school," as the announcement states, "will seek to develop a scholarly type of student." It also is planned to enable specially gifted students to go ahead without being kept back by those of slower gait. Instruction will be given in small classes. The study of Latin will be started two years earlier than in the four-year high school. Everything is planned "to lay deeper and firmer foundations for the work that follows."

By this wise and bold move the city of Cincinnati, under the leadership of Superintendent CONDON, has shown the way to create a school giving the best general education, based mainly on a few fundamental studies well and amply taught, without the admixture of miscellaneous "fads and frills." It has also shown the way to furnish preparation of the best character for our universities, a preparation which may well serve as a standard for the general establishment of a straight six-year high school course, beginning two years earlier than at present and providing really substantial general education for capable boys and girls. The establishment of this school comes in response to a growing demand in Cincinnati for something better than the incongruous miscellany provided in so many so-called "courses of study." It is to be hoped the example of Cincinnati will soon be followed in many other cities. If this happens, a powerful revival of genuine education in our secondary schools will surely follow. ANDREW F. Justice Hoffman's Record.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The candidacy of Justice Benjamin Hoffman for re-election in the Second Municipal Court District of Manhattan deserves mention. Judge Hoffman is just completing his second term. His record has been an excellent one and justifies his re-election. Although a Democrat, he has been indorsed by the Republicans—a fortunate thing—for the district in which he will run is strongly Socialistic.

While statistics are frequently published of the volume of business in the courts, it is seldom that we have authentic information as to the individual record of Judges. For that reason an official table of appeals taken from Judge Hoffman's decisions from 1916 to date is of unusual interest. The records prior to 1916 are not available. It is to be remembered that as a general rule a Municipal Court Justice tries as many as 1,200 cases a year.

In 1916 there were only 24 appeals from his decisions, which resulted in 21 affirmances, 2 reversals, and 1 modification. In 1917 there were 16 appeals, resulting in 12 affirmances and 3 reversals. In 1918 there were 20 appeals, resulting in 16 affirmances, 3 reversals, 2 modifications, and 3 dismissals. In 1919 there were 23 appeals, all resulting in affirmances. FRANK MOSS.

Government Baggage Handling.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

An interesting example of the conditions caused by Government operation of railroads recently came to me.

Last week we had occasion to ship some supplies to Cleveland, and our salesman was unable to check his two trunks, even by paying excess baggage, because both trunks were over a certain prescribed weight. On his return trip, having left the samples in Cleveland, he was unable to check the trunks as personal baggage because they were empty, and therefore unweighed. He had a transfer company deliver the trunks to the baggage room at the Cleveland depot, and, when he found they could not be handled as baggage, the baggage employes refused to move them over to the express room and the express employes refused to go to the baggage room for them.

In the old days both the railroad and the express company would have been alert to secure business rather than repel it.

New York, Oct. 9, 1919. COMMERCIAL.

Justice Newburger.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your editorial upon Justice Newburger's record on the bench is of extraordinary interest, the more so since it was my personal privilege to be a juror in his part for three weeks, having been detained on a very unpleasant case in many respects; a case which involved a foreign and a domestic competitor. The case demanded an unbiased, true, wide, patient and masterly mind; all of this and more combined in Judge Newburger.

Such a character as Justice Newburger, a man with deep-seated principles, who seeks to be square and administers justice dispassionately, must be continued upon the bench.

Judge Newburger should not be allowed to be turned down by Tammany or any party simply because he refuses to dance to the music of political bosses, right or wrong.

Lovers of justice in this country, and of fair play for all, are all with Justice Newburger, to see that righteousness triumphs over unrighteousness and to deal a death blow to that political system which draws the honorable and untarnished name of our judiciary down to the political mire.

Returned Soldiers and Dead Trees.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

While walking through Central Park recently I observed almost countless dead trees, which give a most dejected and neglected air to the entire park. This was particularly noticeable in the more wild portion of the park lying between the Casino and Central Park West.

It occurred to me that many of the returned soldiers who are unsuccessfully seeking work could be profitably employed in cleaning up this dead wood. To this manner a threefold purpose might be served. Employment could be given to a number of men, the appearance of the park could be vastly improved, and hundreds of cords of good firewood could be obtained which could be distributed by the Charities Department, turned over to the Salvation Army, or sold if need be.

Many of our soldiers after months in camps and out-of-door environments find it most difficult to adapt themselves to an inside, confining occupation, (even if they can secure one,) and I believe a chance at the work herein referred to would be most welcome to many of them. The work would not be too hard—most of the trees are relatively small and the timber dead—it would be a healthy, interesting job to jump in and "clean up" Central Park.

Route Charts on the Subway.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

How many people desiring to travel to downtown Manhattan on the new subways have awakened to find themselves in Brooklyn or Jersey City? How many anxious moments have been spent by travelers in wondering how many more stations there are to the station they need?

All this anxiety and inconvenience could be avoided if route charts were posted in the cars, showing lines for the route and circles with the names for the stations, so that the passenger from his seat can follow the journey intelligently without pestering the guards with unnecessary questions.

This is done in European subways; why not in New York? J. PAYNE GODGWIN.

SEES IN RELIGION CURE OF LABOR ILLS

The Rev. Dr. Clare Tells Colgate Men Mere Wage Increases Will Be Futile.

WARNING TO THE COLLEGES

He Fears That Too Much Emphasis May Be Laid by Them on Material Success.

Special to The New York Times.

HAMILTON, N. Y., Oct. 12.—The Colgate Centennial Celebration was officially brought to a close with the session of the Rev. Dr. Daniel Hunt Clare, '95, in the University Chapel here this morning. Most of the 1,500 alumni who attended the exercises of the week were present and it was to them and the undergraduates that Dr. Clare addressed his remarks.

Dr. Clare spoke on "The Social Responsibility of the College Man," taking as his text Exodus ii., 11: "And it came to pass in those days, when Moses was grown up, that he went out unto his brethren and looked on their burdens." He declared that both the strength of the Republic and its peril lay in the American colleges.

"Nothing could be more fatal to our beloved country," he said, "than to have its college men become a separate caste, alienated from the experiences and aspirations and estranged in sympathy and understanding from the burdens and sorrows of the great masses of men. There is no danger of such alienation springing from absorption in learning or in scholastic interests. The danger will come, if at all, in viewing a college course exclusively as the surest way to material success and personal gain."

Dr. Clare's fear is that the colleges are too diligently educating our young men to come forth with a sense of advantage over the unprivileged which enables them to reap profit from the ignorance of their fellows, to exploit and manipulate them for selfish purposes in commercial or political life.

Speaking of the industrial unrest Dr. Clare said that no one could look with understanding eyes upon the world's toil without the recognition of the presence of evils which, unless they were removed, would rankle and fester till the whole land was sick.

"Contrary to common opinion," he added, "our colleges are not the vulwarks of privilege, the citadels of conservation or upholders of the order which has produced many of the men whose wealth has endowed them. Rather they are embracing the imperative task of equalizing the burdens of life and seeking more equitable distribution of the fruits of toil.

"We rejoice today in the overthrow of autocracy across the sea, but the overthrow of that autocracy has made the guardianship of our democracy a more urgent duty. There is no mysterious magic in our form of Government. In the words of Roosevelt, that intrepid and true American, 'the fairest dreams of golden glory in the future will not come true unless light of heart and strong of hand, by our own mighty deeds we make them come true.'

"We will be fraught with grave peril to the United States should the mass of its college-bred citizens become so absorbed in their professional and business careers that the delicate problems of our democracy in these crucial years shall be left to the blundering hands of the ignorant or the unscrupulous manipulation of the agitator and the demagogue."

Dr. Clare declared that the only solution of the industrial problem was religion.

"The wage workers will never be satisfied with higher wages and shorter hours," he said, "any more than you and I will be satisfied with larger profit and a bigger house. Such things never did satisfy any one, and they never will."

DISCUSSES UNITED CHURCH.

Roman Catholic Review Hopes for Advantages from World Conference.

ROME, Oct. 11.—In an article devoted to the proposed world conference of churches, the Civilta Cattolica, a leading review published in this city by the Jesuits, quotes from letters addressed to Cardinal Gasparri, Papal Secretary of State, by Robert H. Gardiner of Boston, Mass., in which Mr. Gardiner acknowledges the Roman church "deserves praise for having recalled her children to unity."

The review repeats recent arguments that the Holy See cannot be represented at the world conference, and cannot permit Catholics to participate, but hopes "advantages will come from the conference, at least to those Protestants who in good faith strongly feel the need of a return to a united church, and are seeking the way with true uprightness of heart."

"All Catholics, led by the Pontiff," it says, "will with this in mind pray for promoters of the conference."

Appeal to Wilson and Congress Accuses Poland of Inhumanity.

Matthias J. Vishkas and Julius J. Bielskis of the Executive Committee of the Lithuanian National Council yesterday made public a statement which their organization had addressed to the President and Congress, under the title of "Lithuania against Poland; an Appeal for Justice." The statement charged the new Polish Government with violation of the principles of justice, fair play, humanity and protection of the weak against the strong.

It also charged that Polish troops have seized and occupied many Lithuanian towns and villages, including the City of Vilna, capital of Lithuania, robbing and killing thousands of people, compelling Lithuanian soldiers to join the Polish army, and debasing Lithuanian churches. It is alleged the soldiers of General Haller's army, raised in America and sent across the ocean at the expense of the American Government have participated in these acts and that the Polish Government has disregarded the Peace Conference by withdrawing its officers beyond the temporary line of demarcation set between Lithuanian and Polish troops.

The statement appealed to the American Government and people to put a stop to the alleged aggressions of Poland against Lithuania.

NEW CARDINALS EXPECTED.

Pope Is Not Likely to Elevate Another American, However.

ROME, Oct. 12.—According to a report in circulation in Vatican quarters there is still a probability that a new American Cardinal will be appointed at the Consistory the Pope will hold during the first fortnight in December. The probability is considered very slight, however.

The report had its origin in the news that the Pontiff, in addition to elevating Mgr. Kakowski, Archbishop of Warsaw, to the Cardinalate, will create another, or perhaps two more, foreign Cardinals, one of whom might be an American.

The Consistory in December will witness the inauguration of the series of great ceremonies at the Vatican suspended during the war. In the first months of 1920 there are to be three canonizations, culminating with that of Joan of Arc, which is fixed for Whitsuntide and will be a glorification of the loyalty to religion of the warrior spirit of France.

RGUES FOR NEED OF A THIRD PARTY

llan A. McCurdy Tells Why St. Louis National Convention Was Called.

ENIES RADICAL INFLUENCE

ays Many Persons Are Tired of Democrats and Republicans and Want New Alignment.

The aims of the Committee of Forty-eight in the conference they have called for Dec. 9, at St. Louis, to consider launching a new national political party, were discussed last night by the Secretary of the committee, Allan A. McCurdy, at the Labor Temple, Second Avenue and Fourteenth Street. Mr. McCurdy denied the movement was supported by revolutionary influences.

"I see none of the signs or the makings of a revolution in America," said Mr. McCurdy, "nor will American ideals and political life be much affected by those who would transplant the doctrines of Soviet Russia, or the influences of the British Labor Party. America has her own ideals, and her own political aims, and she will work out her destiny in her own way.

"Many people in this country think the time has come for a new political alignment. It is in accordance with this expressed wish, obtained by responses from a questionnaire sent throughout the country, that the conference has been called to determine whether there shall be a new party. Delegates have been elected from all the States as representatives of those who believe a new national party is needed.

"It has been asked why cannot this be done by the Socialist Party? The Socialist Party cannot force a realignment of the old political parties, and without a realignment we cannot get anywhere. There are men and women of both the Democratic and Republican parties who want this realignment, who do not want Socialism. The South won't vote Republican ticket, and the North will not vote Democratic.

"Voters who want a new party to declare issues that concern them before the country, see no difference between the Republican and the Democratic parties. Both are reactionary.

"You hear people speak of class consciousness. There is no such thing. Out in Pennsylvania we found a miner one of whose sons was a lawyer, another a physician, and a third son Representative from that district in the House at Washington. There are labor leaders in this city whose daughters are secretaries to officers of great financial institutions, or whose sons are clerks in banks.

DRIVE FOR ITALIAN RELIEF.

Speakers Tell of 185,000 Orphans Among Their War Victims.

A combined Columbus Day celebration, marking the start of a drive to raise $185,000 for immediate relief work in Italy, was held yesterday afternoon and night at several points in New York, the chief event being that at the Metropolitan Opera House, where Mme. Galli Curci sang under the auspices of the Italian War Relief Fund, as told elsewhere in THE TIMES today. There were speeches in addition to the musical program: Italy's part in the war was outlined by Lieutenant Bruno Roselli, while Mrs. William Vanamee, Secretary of the Italian War Relief Fund, told of the organization's work, and made a plea in behalf of the 185,000 war orphans in Italy. About 5,000 copies of a bas-relief medal of Columbus's flagship, the Santa Maria, which led the discoverer's fleet to America in 1492, were distributed by the local committee, the President of which is Robert Underwood Johnson.

912 ARRIVE FROM EUROPE.

Strike Here Forces Passengers to Leave Baggage on Liners.

The Cunard liner Saxonia arrived in port late yesterday afternoon from London with 335 passengers, having debarked 518 others at Halifax. The liner also brought 2,000 sacks of mail from Great Britain. The French liner Savoie from Havre arrived with 577 passengers and more than 1,000 sacks of mail from the Continent. Most of the heavy baggage was left on board for the night, as there was too small a force on the pier to handle it and many of the passengers preferred to sleep on the ship to going without their baggage.

Recovering After 100-Foot Fall.

Physicians and nurses at Gouverneur Hospital have conferred the name of "Indestructible John" upon 18-year-old John Maher of 23 Adams Street, Stamford, Conn., who is recovering from a 100-foot fall yesterday from the roadway of Manhattan Bridge to a concrete paved yard, crashing through a tar paper roofed shed on the way. Lacerations of the scalp and the "possible internal injuries," which ambulance surgeons record to guard themselves against possible future developments, are the sum total of his hurts.

ADMITS KILLING SOLDIER.

Camp Dix Cook Says He Slew Man in Self-Defense.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMP DIX, N. J., Oct. 12.—The killing of Private John Smanesatto last Saturday night was cleared up today, army intelligence officers said, by an alleged confession by William P. Simmons, head cook at the Remount Station, to the effect that he stabbed Smanesatto in self-defense in a fight.

Simmons said, according to officers, that he alone was responsible, although it has been believed that several men, some of whom were arrested as important witnesses, knew of the killing. The officers have not yet been able to check up several points of the confession.

According to the confession, a quarrel that began in the barracks kitchen led to a fight. Smanesatto was recently assigned to work in the kitchen. Trouble arose, Simmons said, when Smanesatto shirked his work. Simmons is said to have declared that when they met outside of camp he was attacked by his Italian helper.

AID GIRL SCOUTS' DRIVE.

Society Women to Join Effort for $100,000 and 100,000 Members.

Mrs. V. Everit Macy, Chairman of the Girl Scouts' drive for funds and for associate members, scheduled to begin on Oct. 25, has announced that the Executive Board of the Scouts will serve as the Campaign Committee for the National Drive. The board members include Mrs. Selden Bacon, Mrs. Nicholas F. Brady, Miss Ellen M. Cassatt, Mrs. Arthur O. Choate, Mrs. John H. Hammond, Mrs. Harold I. Pratt, Miss Llewellyn Parsons, and others.

In New York some of those on the Campaign Committee are Mrs. Frederick W. Allen, Mrs. Linzee Blagden, Mrs. J. H. Brooks, Mrs. Frederick Edey, Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, Jr., Mrs. J. P. Grace, Mrs. Charles L. Riker, Mrs. Samuel Sloan, Mrs. Willard Straight, and the Misses Caroline Choate, Mary Sloan Colt, and Anna Marshall.

The campaign will extend from Oct. 25 to Nov. 1, and the quota for Manhattan is $100,000 and 100,000 associate members. It is planned to use the funds to expand the organization and extend to thousands of girls the benefits of scout training.

To Speak for Roosevelt Memorial.

Major Gen. Leonard Wood is to address a public meeting of the Woman's Roosevelt Memorial Association at Carnegie Hall on Friday evening, when Captain Arthur P. Cosby, of the old Rough Riders, will present a flag for Roosevelt House, the memorial to be built at 28 East Twentieth Street, on the site where Colonel Roosevelt was born, in 1858. Mrs. John Henry Hammond will preside. Colonel Roosevelt's sister, Mrs. Douglas Robinson, will read her poem "Sagamore," and William Wolcott Ellsworth will give an illustrated lecture on "Theodore Roosevelt, American." Motion pictures of "Colonel Roosevelt in Action" will also be shown, with comments by Professor W. A. Braun of Columbia University.

Miss Daniell Chooses Bridesmaids.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert V. Weber of 875 Park Avenue have issued invitations for the wedding of Miss Lila K. Daniell and Ehrick B. Kilner, on Saturday, Nov. 1, at the Central Presbyterian Church. Miss Daniell has selected the Misses Elizabeth Curran, Margaret Goss, Genevieve Parker, Evelyn Thurber and Marguerite Daniell as her attendants. John S. Kilner will be best man, and the reception is to be at the St. Regis.

ENGAGEMENTS.

Mr. and Mrs. William Rose Knight, of Germantown, Penn., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Marian Stewart Harper, to Donald L. Kellogg, of Richmond Hill, N. Y. The marriage is to take place in November. Mr. Kellogg served as Captain in the Ordnance Department, U. S. A. Miss Harper was graduated from the Agnes Scott College, at Decatur, Ga.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael William Dippel, of 825 West End Avenue, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Emily Marie Dippel, to Maximilian E. Stirn, of Chicago.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Bessie Frankel, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Frankel, of 493 West End Avenue, to Oscar Hochberger, of this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Weinberg, of 895 St. Marks Avenue, Brooklyn, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Irene Weinberg, to Mortimer Sylvan Levy, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Sylvan Levy, of 920 St. Marks Avenue.

The engagement has been announced of Miss Janet C. Van Vliet, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Van Vliet, of Washington Avenue, Plainfield, N. J., to Guy Stevens Lyman, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry P. Lyman, of Cleveland, Ohio.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Eleanor Johnson, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Lee Johnson, of Montclair, N. J., to William E. Blewett, a son of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Blewett, of Glen Ridge.

Mr. and Mrs. Israel Jackson Roe, of 310 West Ninety-eighth Street, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Dorothy Roe, to Frank Mayer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Mayer, who served overseas with the Third Corps Motor Train.

BELGIAN MONARCHS AT ANCIENT MISSION

Are First Royalty to Visit the Old Spanish Church in Santa Barbara.

WOMAN DOUBTS THE KING

Mountain Dweller Thinks It a Joke When Told Her Visitor Is Albert.

SANTA BARBARA, Cal., Oct. 12.—Albert of the Belgians, with his consort and the Duke of Brabant, attended mass today in the historic Spanish mission of Santa Barbara. The scene within the ancient church was in striking contrast to the pomp of the service in Boston's cathedral last Sunday, but was no less interesting.

Franciscan friars in their dark brown habits waited upon the gray stone steps to receive their Majesties, and a throng of parishioners had gathered around the doors when the royal cars approached. The Spanish fathers formed in line and led the procession, while four of them held a canopy over the royal Belgians as they filed slowly down the aisle. The King and Queen dipped their fingers in holy water and crossed themselves reverently when they passed the sacred portal.

They were ushered to seats at the left of the altar upon the sanctuary, which never before had received a ruling monarch, although it had been a place of worship for 133 years. All three knelt as the simple service began and followed the mass devoutly. Sisters of St. Vincent and St. Francis sat just back of the King's entourage, but the cowled and long-cloaked monks had a room apart.

The Belgians were welcomed by Father Jullus, the superior of the order, which has conducted the mission since it was founded, in 1786, by Father Fermine Lasuen. The original adobe structure was destroyed by an earthquake in 1812, and the one which now stands was dedicated in 1820.

After mass the party filed into the mission church yard, where the King planted a cypress and an orange tree to memorialize his visit there. The Queen was the first woman in nineteen years to pass inside the garden walls. The last before her was Mrs. William McKinley, wife of the former President. The Countess de Caraman-Chimay and Mrs. Brand Whitlock passed in also with the Queen. All three were greeted cordially, although the law of the church forbids the passage of women within the walls of a monastery, except by special dispensation.

From the church the King and his physician were driven to the beach at Miramar, where they plunged into the ocean.

The King and J. M. Nye, Chief Special Agent of the State Department, took a long motor ride this afternoon and Albert drove. At Mountain Ridge the King was thirsty. The State Department agent started in search of a well and found one at the home of Mrs. John Brinkerhoff. Albert followed close behind.

"Mrs. Brinkerhoff," said Nye, "this is his Majesty, the King of the Belgians."

"Go on," scoffed the owner of the well. "You can't kid me."

"But, Madam, it is so," interposed the King.

"You may be a Belgian," said Mrs. Brinkerhoff, "but you are not the King, for I know how he looks."

She was finally convinced, but her embarrassment was no greater than that of his Majesty.

ARMED MEN ROB DINERS.

Hold Up Restaurant and Drive Off in Car—Three Suspects Caught.

A group of armed men walked into the restaurant, bar, poolroom, and dance hall of Frank Majdes, at Seventy-fourth Street and Third Avenue, last evening, and, posting themselves at advantageous positions, compelled the crowd of Bohemian patrons to file before them and deliver up their valuables.

The proprietor's wife, refusing an order to come from behind the bar, was kicked and thrown out. Majdes ran out a side door which the robbers forgot to guard and yelled for the police. Hearing him, the men hurried away in an automobile.

Standing on the west drive, Patrolman Thomas Matthews of the Central Park station saw a car bearing the license number of the one reported to have taken the robbers away. He pursued it in a commandeered car and overtook it after a long run.

The occupants denied all knowledge of the robbery. One had $22 in silver in his pockets. Harry Helf, the chauffeur, of 705 Courtland Avenue, Bronx; John Daley, 106 Charles Street, and Philip Brooks, 247 East Seventy-seventh Street, were held on charges of robbery. A man and his wife, who said the others had picked them up two hours after the robbery occurred, were held as material witnesses.

Joseph Stein of 1,469 Lexington Avenue, owner of the car, said he had lent it to Helf, his chauffeur.

WOULD CONTINUE SERVICE.

Girls Who Helped Entertain Soldiers Seek Other Patriotic Work.

Three thousand New York girls who were mobilized into the dancing army of the New York Camp Community Service almost two years ago, have requested that they be held together in some sort of organization for further service to the country and the community. The request was made to Mrs. James Madison Bass, who developed the dancing army idea.

"I have promised the girls that they shall continue their service to the country," said Mrs. Bass yesterday, "and there are many fields in which their work is needed. They can work with the wounded soldiers still in the hospitals, and they can work with the American Legion in perpetuating the ideals of the army. But I see in this group the foundation for a power that can do a lot to crush Bolshevism. Every one of the young women is representative of the educated class, and by their actions, their conversation, and their influence, they can prevent the spread of Bolshevistic doctrine, and they can scatter the seeds of patriotism that are so much needed at this time."

Active work has been begun by Mrs. Bass to perfect the organization of the peace-time army of New York girls.

TO VISIT METEORITE SITE.

Maryland Academy of Sciences Plans Trip to Utah.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 12.—Under the auspices of the Maryland Academy of Sciences an expedition is being organized to explore the region near Gerfield, Utah, where a great meteorite fell. John Patton, inventor and engineer, and Professor Francis C. Nicholas, Curator of the Maryland Academy, will be included in the expedition.

Mr. Patton owns the land on which the meteorite fell, having acquired it for the purpose of keeping it intact for scientific investigation by the Maryland Academy, of which he is a life member.

NAVY FOOD FOR SALE SOON.

Public May Purchase Practically All Components of Sailor's Ration.

The Navy Department made public yesterday the list of foodstuffs allotted to New York City for sale in the public schools. The list to which prices are appended included everything on a sailor menu from mackerel in kegs to sacks of rice. The prices are far below prevailing market quotations and are about the same as charged for army food. The sale will start this week, according to Jonathan C. Day, Commissioner of Markets.

Federal Food Administrator Arthur Williams said yesterday that he was going to make a determined attempt this week to come to some agreement which will stop the slow but steady rise in the prices of butter, cheese and eggs. A meeting of the Butter, Cheese and Egg Sub-Committee of the Fair Price Committee has been called for the middle of the week.

When it meets, Mr. Williams plans to suggest to the committee that it allow a representative of the United States Attorney-General to attend its sessions. He appointed Oscar Straus to the wholesale meat committee, and Louis Marshall to the Committee on Jewish Bread. Both men achieved results which the Food Administrator believes warrants him taking similar action in the matter of butter and eggs. William Fellowes Morgan has been mentioned as a possible appointee.

SCRANTON GREETS MERCIER

All Religious Denominations Join in Tribute of Esteem.

SCRANTON, Pa., Oct. 12.—Desideratus Cardinal Mercier, Primate of Belgium and Prince of the Church, was warmly welcomed to Scranton today, thousands of citizens greeting him at a big public meeting in the armory this afternoon when honorary citizenship was conferred upon him. During the morning he celebrated mass at Saint Peter's Cathedral, when 1,000 members of the Holy Name Society received communion. Bands, and later praided at a Pontifical high mass.

This afternoon's meeting was a wonderful testimony of the esteem of America for Belgium, representatives of all religious denominations in the city participating in the welcome to the distinguished visitor, who at the close declared that he accepted the tributes paid him, not for himself but for his dear Belgium.

Tonight Cardinal Mercier and Maj. Gen. James W. McAndrew, who entered the army from this city, were guests of the Knights of Columbus at their annual banquet. Fourth degree knighthood was conferred on the Cardinal during the evening.

RICHARD B. TUNSTALL DIES.

Former Lawyer in This City Fought as Schoolboy in Civil War.

Richard Baylor Tunstall, who practiced law in this city from 1871 to 1883, died in Norfolk, Va., on Saturday at the age of 71. Since returning to his native city he had been an active member of the bar in Norfolk until his retirement in 1907. His wife, who died in 1905, was Miss Isabel Helser of this city.

As a student of the Virginia Military Institute in May, 1864, Mr. Tunstall, with his fellow cadets, fought in the battle of New Market under General Breckenridge. He was a director of the Norfolk Railway & Light Company, and an elector on the Palmer and Buckner ticket in 1896. In 1912-1913 he was Chancellor of the Diocese of Southern Virginia.

SENSATIONAL
By DR. BERTHOLD A. BAER

Said a friend to me:

"Why do you use sensational headlines for your little talks?"

"I do not," I answered; "I write nothing but the truth. But, strange to say, truth is nearly all times sensational."

"You have the most sensational institution I ever saw," said a well known Senator from Washington to Frank E. Campbell, when he had for the first time gone through The Funeral Church, Broadway at 66th Street.

Mr. Campbell looked puzzled. He prided himself on conducting the most modern, most complete, and best managed institution of its kind in the country, if not in the world, for the care and burial of the dead. And here comes a Senator, whose name is in the mouth of every well read citizen, and compliments him upon the "sensational" part of it.

"Sensational?" asked Mr. Campbell.

"Most certainly," said the Senator. "You have accomplished what no one else dared to undertake. Here is a place where the dead is taken after demise. He is cared for with loving tenderness; he is laid out so that family and friends may come to see him whenever time or inclination prompts them; he is taken to The Funeral Church in your own building, and there a service is tendered as beautiful as human thought can conceive. You yourself do not seem to realize what a wonderful institution you are giving to your City; it's sensational, it's sensational."

The Senator is right; New Yorkers do not seem to realize what a wonderful institution there is in their midst, devoted to their service, for their benefit.

People from all over the country come to visit The Funeral Church, Broadway at 66th Street—why not you?

Value—High in quality, moderate in price,—was once a business paradox.
Until American business genius, by huge buying, turned the paradox into a truth.
Park and Tilford, by their tremendous buying for their ten New York stores, are able to buy up to a standard, not down to a price—and yet the price is down. Thus quality and moderation in price become compatible.

THREATEN TO LEAVE EPISCOPAL CHURCH

Virginia Dioceses May Withdraw If Prayer Book Is Revised.

FIGHT CHURCH CHANGES

Clergymen of Triennial Convention Exhort Churches to Aid In Solving National Problems.

DETROIT, Oct. 12.—The withdrawal of the three Virginia dioceses from the general convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church is threatened if attempts now being made at the triennial convention here to revise the prayer book are successful. There is a split in the House of Deputies over revision, with the controversy centering about the attitude of the delegations from the three Virginia dioceses.

"The general convention has gone as far as it can on revision of the book of prayer," said one Virginian today. "If an attempt is made to force the issue on the reservation of the Sacrament, and it is successfully pushed, the Virginia delegation will meet the situation. The Virginia Church was out of the general convention four years (during the civil war) and successfully stood as an autonomous church body. If necessary we can stand alone again."

The Virginia delegates oppose the changes on the ground that they tend toward "high church" practices.

The nation-wide campaign to finance church extension work and maintain present activities for the next three years by raising from $55,000,000 to $100,000,000 or more, was interpreted to convention delegates and members in a mass meeting and seven overflow meetings tonight. The speakers included Lewis B. Franklin of New York, who organized the country for the five Liberty Loan campaigns and has general direction of this campaign; Bishop Arthur B. Lloyd of New York, Bishop Charles P. Anderson of Chicago, James Pershing of Denver, Colo., cousin of General Pershing; Bishop Lucien Lee Kinsolving of Brazil, Bishop Henry St. George Tucker of Japan, and George Zabriskie of New York.

A special commission is to be named to handle all resolutions and memorials dealing with international relations, whose report is expected again to bring the League of Nations to the front in the convention. A contest on the indorsement of the League of Nations Covenant is looked for in the House of Deputies, where several contradictory resolutions already have been introduced.

Bishops and other clergymen attending the convention today spoke in churches of Detroit and other Michigan cities on issues before the world and the part the church must take in meeting them.

A most impressive service was the consecration today of St. Paul's Cathedral here, said to be one of the finest examples of Gothic architecture in America. The ceremonial service used was brought down from the early days of the Christian church and was in charge of Bishop Charles D. Williams of Michigan.

Bishop William Lawrence of Massachusetts, preaching the consecration sermon, urged a "free and open" church and declared the locking up of millions of dollars in stone and mortar might prove dangerous even to causing a social upheaval, unless it could be justified by public service.

CELEBRATE COLUMBUS DAY.

Many Representatives of Southern Republics at the Astor.

The anniversary of the discovery of America by Columbus was celebrated with a reception and dinner last night at the Hotel Astor by the Spanish speaking colony of New York. The celebration was conducted under the auspices of the Union Benefica Espanola. Among the two hundred and fifty guests at the reception were consuls representing nearly all of the South American Republics, in addition to representatives of Cuba, Spain, and Mexico. Following the dinner there were Spanish folk dances and a concert.

José Camprubi, President of the Union Benefica Espanola, introduced the speakers, among whom were Alejandro Beres, Consul of Spain in New York and Emeterio de la Garza. Mr. de la Garza advocated the unification of all Latin countries in South America into one great nation.

Among the guests were Dr. and Mrs. Pio de Lara, Mr. and Mrs. Angel Peres de Camino, Felipe Taboada, Consul of Cuba in New York, Mr. and Mrs. Delfin Gonsales, Mr. and Mrs. Manuel B. Pena, Mr. and Mrs. Alfredo V. de G. Callao, Mr. and Mrs. Joaquin Rivera, José Castellet and José Vila.

To Dedicate Carrere Memorial.

A memorial to John Merven Carrer, the architect, who was killed in a street car accident in 1911, will be dedicated at Riverside Drive and Ninety-eighth Street on Thursday afternoon. The memorial, of pink Milford granite, will be in the form of an exedra and staircase leading from the path at the level of the drive to the park below. The committee in charge of the erecting of the memorial were Joseph H. Freelander, Donn Barber, William B. Rutherford Mead, Benjamin W. Morris, H. Van Buren Magonigle and Electus D. Litchfield. Mr. Carrer was a member of the firm of Carrere & Hastings.

Welcome Richmond Veterans.

Several thousand citizens of Staten Island attended yesterday a reception at the Borough Hall to the returned soldiers from Richmond Borough and a luncheon that was given later to the veterans at Curtis Field. A Welcome Home Committee of the Island's prominent citizens comprising 160 members was on hand to greet the men but no speeches were made. As the veterans appeared at the Borough Hall they were presented with certificates of service by William G. Willcox, chairman of the committee.

REDS ASSAULT VETERANS.

Seattle Radicals Try to Stop Loading of Rifles for Russia.

Special to The New York Times.

SEATTLE, Wash., Oct. 12.—Two former United States soldiers, members of the American Legion, who are part of a crew of veterans engaged to place a cargo of rifles consigned to the Russian Government at Vladivostok aboard a steamer, were attacked today by Bolshevist sympathisers and slightly injured.

The refusal of the Longshoremen's Union to handle the rifles on the ground that they were destined to be used against the Bolsheviki by Admiral Kolchak led the Shipping Board to send an urgent request to the owners of the steamer Delight, to ascertain if sympathisers with the Reds could prevent the United States Government from functioning.

The American Legion undertook to recruit a crew to handle the cargo, and the work began Saturday night. Today when the force of former soldiers had been increased to sixty men, hundreds of longshoremen assembled at the pier and at the places where the men were expected to take their noon luncheon. A police guard prevented a clash at the pier, but when two of the ex-soldiers became separated from their comrades they were suddenly set upon.

HARRIMAN NATIONAL BANK
NEW YORK

A Free—and Easy—Land

Like certain forms of epidemic disease, the propaganda to forgive the debt of the Allies recurs from time to time, latent in the proposal now for the internationalization of the debt.

The Harriman National Bank has repeatedly warned the public of this danger, which the enactment of a budget system would at once end. As a tax-payer, we have repeatedly advised the public as to the necessity of a budget for a business-like administration of the Government and the reduction of taxes. We said in May, 1918, that there should be no "guessing" where billions are concerned; we pointed out in June, 1918, that the enactment of a budget would result in the annual saving of hundreds of millions; in December, 1918, we called attention to the fact that a budget system had been promised by both political parties; in May, 1919, we stated that a budget law would offer the Sixty-sixth Congress a wonderful opportunity to earn honors and reward, and we repeat it to-day.

The bearing of a budget upon taxes and the relation of taxes to the debt of the Allies are obvious. We have long and frequently urged, beginning January, 1919, that this debt should be financed and issued as secured obligations of the Government. They could be readily marketed with the American investing public and would afford a basis for our education in the purchase of foreign securities to which we must ultimately come.

But, without a budget, the United States Government will never be able to make an intelligent financial statement, and without such statement what wise investor will care to buy our bonds?

Are You Getting a "Fair" Shave or a Perfect Shave?

See the Gillette Service Experts at one of these stores. The service is free

They can show you the "little knack" of holding the razor tilted just enough to engage the beard.

They will explain the proper adjustment for your beard and skin. And how to improve your shaving by the use of the angle stroke.

Seeing the Gillette Expert takes but a few minutes. There is no charge. And you will have the satisfaction of knowing how to get all the service your Gillette can give.

Bring your razor along and let the Gillette Expert go over it for you.

It may be slightly damaged or need a trifling adjustment. The Expert will take care of that, without charge.

Another thing! Don't skimp on your lathering. A good lather, well rubbed in, helps the razor do its work properly.

And don't be too sparing with your blades. They work so well it's a temptation to see how long one will last.

Surprising how much an occasional new blade improves your shave.

A Gillette is a profitable investment for any man. In the course of a year you save its cost many times over. Fees and tips count up amazingly.

If there is any man in this town who is not getting a satisfactory shave, we want to know it.

Fruit Juices Protect Teeth

Mennen Cream Dentifrice has a mild fruit content. Fruit acid protects teeth by increasing the flow of saliva. Saliva is Nature's perfect mouth wash. It destroys the poisons of decayed food particles. An ample flow of saliva prevents teeth trouble.

The fruit acid in Mennen's stimulates the salivary glands—makes your mouth water—thus aiding Nature. Some dentifrices are strongly alkaline and partially paralyze the salivary glands. Such dentifrices are dangerous.

Mennen Cream Dentifrice cleans the teeth scientifically—breaks down tartar formations, and removes tobacco stains. A 20% content of alcohol conditions the gums and exerts an antiseptic action.

Mennen's is pleasant to use—highly efficient, leaves a refreshing after-taste. It is so concentrated that a 35 cent tube lasts a long time. Try it.

REGISTRATION STIRS INDEPENDENTS' HOPE

NEWBURGER MEN PLEASED

TOTAL NUMBER IS 1,085,786

Politicians Say Issues of 1920 and Return of Electors from War Were the Big Factors.

Candidates and politicians alike expressed satisfaction yesterday with the result of last week's registration, which established a new high record for this city. Among the promoters of independent candidacies, the figures were generally accepted as a manifestation of unusual interest by the voters in an "off year" campaign, out of which they professed to spell victory.

In the sober analyses of seasonal political observers and men long active in politics, the totals did not take on the significance ascribed to them by persons who only occasionally take up the practice of politics. They were at no loss to find natural causes for the increase over last year's registration. They ascribed it to several reasons. While admitting it was unusual to have a larger registration in an "off year" than in a year when the Governor and other State officials are elected, they pointed to the influenza epidemic that raged a year ago and to the war activities, then in full swing, as deterrents. They also pointed out that last week's figures included at least 100,000 men and women voters who last year were out of the city, serving in the army or navy, or in other war occupations.

The figures were regarded as showing unusual interest among the voters for an off year, but the subnormal showing the last year rather than the volume of this year's registration was held responsible for the increase.

1920 a Big Factor.

Political leaders also were inclined to regard the interest among the voters as more of an indication that next year's Presidential election was beginning to occupy their minds than that they were aroused over any issue involved in the election this year. Hence, it is the belief in political circles that when the enrollment figures are announced by the Board of Election in January they will show that most voters of both the leading parties registered to be able to enroll for participation in next year's primaries, when the preliminary skirmishes of the Presidential campaign will be fought and a readjustment within the organizations of both the leading parties of the State possibly attempted.

Returns from Saturday's registration were exceedingly late coming in. It was after 10 in the morning hours before all the 5,561 wards had reported. The returns complete the grand total of the registration was 1,085,786, an increase of 68,587 over last year's total of 1,015,-699. The total registration Saturday was 377,042, as compared with 367,313 on the last registration day in 1918.

This and last year's total registration and the last day's registration in both years by boroughs are shown in this table:

Save Strong Independent Sentiment.

Bainbridge Colby, Chairman of the Independent Non-Partisan Judiciary Committee, formed to re-elect Justices Joseph E. Newburger, of the Supreme Court, and Judge Richard H. Smith of the City Court, to both of whom Tammany Leader Murphy refused a renomination after years of service on the bench, had this to say:

"The registration figures are very gratifying to those who are battling for a non-partisan independent judiciary. They demonstrate that the bosses were wrong in their reckoning that this was an 'off year,' and that, therefore, the people were not aroused to the vital issues of the campaign. The figures must have given the bosses a rude awakening. We view with confidence the results of the campaign we are conducting. If those who are registered vote as we believe they will, victory for our cause and candidates is certain."

At headquarters of the committee a prominent worker said Tammany Hall leaders had acted under orders from Leader Murphy and had done everything in their power to keep all but "regulars" who could be depended upon to vote right from registering. The big increase in the registration in Manhattan and the Bronx over last year, as contrasted with the situation in 1915, the last preceding "off year," when there was a registration of 80,000 less in the two boroughs than in 1914, was regarded as indicating a great interest in the Newburger-Smith anti-Tammany campaign, especially as in the Bronx there are no contests for county offices.

SOLE CANDIDATE OF PARTY.

Ex-Soldier Starts Campaign for Presidency of Aldermanic Board.

Michael A. Kelly, a former Major of the 165th Infantry Regiment, the old 69th, who won the Croix de Guerre and the D. S. C., began in the Academy of Music in Brooklyn last night his campaign for the Presidency of the Board of Aldermen on the ticket of the Liberty Party, of which he is the only candidate. He denounced the espionage laws, saying they answered new political ideas with terrorism; assailed the Department of Justice for some of its prosecutions, and scored the Administration for keeping troops in Russia, saying that this contributed to the high cost of living and economic unrest, because Russia is a great wheat producing country.

Kelly poked fun at Mayor Hylan for asserting the traction companies were putting candidates for the Presidency of the Board of Aldermen in the field against Robert L. Moran.

MAY TRY TO DRAFT CURRAN.

Republicans Considering Magistrate as Nominee for Borough President.

The Republican County Committee will meet on Thursday evening to nominate a candidate for President of the Borough of Manhattan to succeed the late Frank D. Dowling. Samuel S. Koenig, Chairman of the committee, said yesterday that a subcommittee of the Executive Committee, which was appointed for the purpose of hunting up a candidate, would meet tomorrow afternoon or Wednesday to consider the availability of a number of men whose names are before them.

Mr. Koenig declined to divulge the name of any, but it is known that City Magistrate Henry H. Curran is favorably considered for the nomination but that grave doubts exist as to his willingness to accept. An attempt was made to draft Magistrate Curran for the nomination for President of the Board of Aldermen and met with no success.

TO OPEN UNTERMYER FIGHT.

Campaign to Start This Week with Q. G. Battle as Leader.

Announcement was made last night from the campaign headquarters of Irwin Untermyer, Democratic candidate for Justice of the Supreme Court, that an active campaign would be begun this week.

George Gordon Battle has accepted the post of Chairman, William Harmon Black, ex-Chairman of the Tammany Hall General Committee, is Vice Chairman, Nathan Straus, Louis Marshall, Francis D. Gallatin, William H. Page, Dock Commissioner Murray Hulbert, Representative George W. Loft, Charles S. Guggenheimer, Benjamin F. Wellman, Jeremiah T. Mahoney, J. Maurice Wormser, and Joseph P. Day are members of the committee.

James F. Donnelly is Chairman of the Bronx Campaign Committee and Captain H. Allen Lily of the Washington Heights Committee.

Step by Candidate for Surrogate Necessitates Special Election.

As an evidence of his confidence of winning, Senator James A. Foley, Democratic leader of the Upper house at Albany, and candidate for Surrogate on the Democratic ticket, has resigned as a member of the State Senate.

The resignation, before Oct. 15, will make it necessary to hold an election in the Sixteenth Senatorial District, which is composed of the Twelfth and Fourteenth Assembly Districts, to succeed him. The Democrats and Republicans will name candidates this week. The district is strongly Democratic.

Martin G. McCue, Assemblyman from the Twelfth District; Mark Goldberg, Assemblyman from the Fourteenth, and Joseph D. Kelly, who represented the Twelfth Assembly District before the recent reapportionment, are mentioned as possible candidates.

MEMORIAL TO WAR VETERANS

Victory Hall to Occupy Block at Park Avenue and Forty-second St.

The project to give New York City a great memorial to its soldiers, sailors and other citizens who served in the war has not only taken definite shape in the last few days, but, it was announced yesterday, has actually been launched. Articles for the incorporation of the Victory Hall Association were approved by Judge Peter A. Hendrick of the Supreme Court last Friday, and were filed with the County Clerk and with the Secretary of State on the same day. The incorporators and directors include many well-known citizens.

The objects of the association are stated in its articles of incorporation to be "to acquire the necessary property and to found, erect and maintain a building in the City of New York, upon the block bounded by Park and Lexington Avenues, Forty-first and Forty-second Streets, in memory of the men and women of the City of New York who have served in the armies, marine, naval and auxiliary forces of the United States, and of the Allied Governments during the world-war."

Crowd Tries to Lynch Aviator When He Lands at Longchamps

PARIS, Oct. 12.—At the Longchamps Racetrack this afternoon an aviator, defying the orders against flying over Paris, came down and landed on the main course where the inclosures were considerably crowded. A woman calmly jumped out of the airplane and walked off, while a big crowd surrounded the pilot in a threatening way.

The aviator took to the air, but before he got clear of the course the machine fell owing to one of the brace rods breaking and crashed just inside the inclosure. The aviator, who was not hurt, was attacked by the crowd and was saved only by police intervention.

Flying over populous centres has been prohibited since the entry of Marshal Petain into Metz, when an aviator, flying low over a crowded square where a review was to take place, struck a telegraph wire and fell into a crowd, killing half a dozen persons.

WISE READY TO QUIT; AGAIN ASSAILS GARY

Offers to Resign Pulpit If Any Large Part of Congregation Thinks It Advisable.

OPENLY REBUKES CRITICS

"Gary Is Fighting the Battle You Would Fight if You Dared," the Rabbi Declares.

In reply to the criticisms leveled at him because of his sermon a week ago in which he attacked Judge Gary and the United States Steel Corporation, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, in addressing his congregation of the Free Synagogue yesterday at Carnegie Hall, offered to resign if any considerable number, not necessarily as many as one-half, of the members of his congregation indicated to him that it would be better for him to leave the pulpit.

Dr. Wise's address was made, it was learned yesterday, because at a regular stated meeting of the executive officers of the synagogue, held the day after he delivered his first sermon attacking Judge Gary, the question was raised as to whether some men wished to continue the support of an institution whose leader took the views expressed by Dr. Wise. Some of the officers, it was said, decided to postpone their decision until the rabbi made clear his entire position, with the result that those who had not heard the sermon the previous week attended the synagogue yesterday in order to form independent judgments. It was reported that Rabbi Wise would soon furnish each member of his congregation with a copy of both sermons.

Taking as his topic "How ought the pulpit to deal with the industrial situation?" Dr. Wise reviewed his address of the previous Sunday, telling of his offer to assist in the organization of the steel workers and of his withdrawal of that offer because of the announcement of the plans for the Industrial Conference. Other reasons which had impelled him to speak, he said, he laid before the executive officers of the synagogue.

Rebukes His Congregation.

After branding "Garyism as the most prolific breeder of revolutionary and Bolshevist sentiments in the land," Dr. Wise said that men in the pulpit must speak out. Pointing his finger at his congregation, among whom there were said to be many large employers in the needle trades, Dr. Wise said:

"Why are some of you disturbed about an attack on Judge Gary? Why so sensitive in respect to my references to him? I know the reason, perhaps as well as some of you. Gary has come to many of you become a symbol, because he is fighting your battle, the battle which you would fight on the morrow if you dared; because you imagine that if Garyism can win unionism will be doomed and all workingmen's organizations smothered."

Referring to the charge that he said had been made, that his utterances hurt the Jewish name, Dr. Wise made this declaration: "If I am to be silent on every great moral issue because I am a Jew, if my lips are to be sealed when truth and conscience bid me speak lest I hurt the Jewish name, then I wish to live in some place, small or large, near or remote, where a man can live without wholly forfeiting self-respect. Of this I would feel utterly reft, if I had to shape my course and govern my speech at every moment by the thought and the fear that some one might take offense at or become hostile to my people because of a word honestly spoken.

"My life and ministry have—I trust I do not unduly flatter myself—not been unserviceable to my people's honor and my people's name. If for a moment some non-Jew has taken offense at my words, and chooses to feel ill-will toward my people because I, one of their teachers, have spoken as I have spoken, then my people must for the moment bear the consequence.

"Were I persuaded that right or wrong, true or false, my word would permanently and irremediably hurt my people, I would not be silent, but would instantly take myself out of the Jewish pulpit. I am ready for that test, if I offer my congregation the privilege of passing upon the question whether or not I ought to remain as their leader and continue to be free to speak as I have spoken. I shall not be offended by any action which my people may choose to take. If it seem best in their sight that I withdraw from their ministry, as God is my witness, and as I believe that God will judge between me and them that assail me, I will withdraw with nothing but friendship and good-will and affection for every member of my congregation, whether I continue to serve it or whether the hour has come for my withdrawal."

Dr. Wise spoke warmly of the action of the Executive Committee of the synagogue with whom he had conferred before making the address of the previous Sunday. He said that none had denied him the right to speak as he felt he must.

Rabbi's Views Known.

When the plans for building an edifice to house the activities of the synagogue came up recently, after having been postponed since the beginning of the war, Dr. Wise said he stated to some of his associates that he hesitated to appeal for public support of the venture unless he could feel that his views on industrial-social questions were so clearly understood that no honest doubt or question could arise with respect to them, and to the views on economic questions he was supposed to hold, by those who would be urged to help. He did not want it to come about that a man should contribute today toward the synagogue home and six months later declare that had he known the views of the rabbi on economic questions he would have withheld his contribution.

After a vigorous denunciation of Bolshevism, Dr. Wise declared Judge Gary "is the outstanding leader of a group of men who, consciously or unconsciously—and they are too wise for the most part not to know what they are doing—are doing everything they can in order to make the present order indefensible."

"That I am not a Bolshevist is as well known as the fact that Judge Gary is not a secret agent of the American Federation of Labor," he continued. "It is rather amusing to think that many good folk have expressed themselves touching my address of last Sunday without regard to the question raised—whether the workingman ought to have the right of organization and collective bargaining. That question has little to do with the scarcity of so-called domestic servants, has nothing to do with the exorbitant demands of the strikers in one industry, or the want of faith in strikers in another industry has nothing to do with these groups of workingmen who chronically strike and only spasmodically work.

"Let no one imagine that I am unaware of or blind to the abuses within the ranks of organized labor. But I maintain that we have no right to judge a principle or a system by the abuses and the evils that have arisen therefrom, so long as these are merely incidental thereto and inevitably bound up therewith."

WOMEN VISITORS BARRED.

Shipyard Owners Say Men Stop Work to Watch Them.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Oct. 12.—The smile of a pretty woman is not regarded as a blessing by officials of the New York Shipbuilding Corporation. In business hours their languishing glances cost the company many hundreds of dollars and seriously disrupt the efficiency of shipyard workers.

This was the explanation offered by officials today for barring women from visiting the Camden plant during working periods. One woman was told recently that it would cost the company $10,000 if she were permitted to go through the plant while the men were working.

More than 20,000 men are employed in the shipyard. When a woman walks through there is an immediate cessation of work and the employes spend many minutes in looking at her. Individually, the time loss may be small, but collectively the financial losses become great.

Anti-Red Fusion Is Planned In Paris; No Royalist Ticket Will Be In the Field

PARIS, Oct. 12. (Associated Press.)—The approaching elections in France will be the first since the fall of the empire in 1870 in which the Republic will not be attacked by Royalists or Imperialists. Imperialists have virtually disappeared from politics, and the Royalists have given up their demand for the return of the Duke of Orleans to become King of France. The Duke himself has asked his supporters to refrain from a campaign against the existing order of things.

Conservatives who were not Royalists, but strong Catholics, and had kept up the fight against the anti-clerical tendencies of the Republic, have announced that they finally accept the separation of Church and State, and are merely counting upon an unprejudiced execution of the law. This has made possible the negotiations now under way for an alliance of all parties except the extreme Socialists in certain departments, including that of the Seine, which embraces Paris.

In Paris a coalition is under consideration by all parties including the new National Socialist Party, made up of dissidents, and led by Gustave Hervé, editor of La Victoire, with the object of forming a union ticket of candidates for the Chamber of Deputies in order to defeat the Socialists and give the death blow to the Bolshevist agitation which has virtually superseded the old Socialist program of collectivism.

The Socialists have maintained thus far the decision of their convention to reject alliances with any other party, and are excluding even some of the important leaders of their party who voted in favor of military credits, and are not considered sufficiently advanced.

FEAR TRAMPS GOT THE DANSEY BABY

Searchers Find Vagrants Were in Old Red House in Wood Near His Home.

GIRL HEARD MEN TALKING

Parties Continue Hunting for Child, and an Appeal Is Made for Help by Governors.

Special to The New York Times.

HAMMONTON, N. J., Oct. 12.—Fear that George M. Dansey, the thirty months old baby who has been missing from home since last Wednesday, may have been abducted by tramps, developed today when searchers learned that an old red house, deep in the woods near the boy's home, had been occupied by vagrants within the last few days. The nearest neighbors saw one of the tramps, and a schoolgirl reported having heard the voices of two men and a boy issuing fro mthe house. Wheel tracks led away from the house. Wheel tracks led away Dacosta and Weymouth.

Despite the heavy rain, planters, militia, reserves, and ex-service men continued the search today, beating up the woods in which a police dog again and again picked up and lost the child's scent several days ago. Despite the offer of $1,400 for Billy's return alive there is no very tangible clue to what happened to him. Even those who think the tramps may have carried him off are at a loss to account for such action in view of there having been no attempt thus far to get a ransom for his return.

Officials have questioned the members of the Dansey family, but have failed to elicit from them anything helpful. The mother is distracted, and the father and grandfather seem unable to make any helpful suggestion. Though every spot in the woods and fields about the child's home has been searched over and a dozen boy and older tiny trades have told of his either having wandered several places on the day of his disappearance or having played there at other times, the search will be continued.

An aid of the Governors of New York and New Jersey has been asked.

A new theory was evolved tonight when it was learned that the family of Charles White, a town Councilman, was threatened a few years ago by Italians with a dog cowpox to which Italians are kitted on the Whits premises. The White boy and the Dansey boy look somewhat alike, and it may be, neighbors think, that the wrong boy was kidnapped.

ALFONSO SEES BOND BETWEEN ALL IBERIANS

Race Day Celebration in Latin America and Spain Affirms Brotherhood, He Says.

BUENOS AIRES, Oct. 12.—Fraternity among the nations of the Spanish Race was the theme of an interview with King Alfonso, had by the correspondent in Spain of La Nacion, and which is published by that newspaper here today.

The correspondent saw the King at San Sebastian on the eve of "the celebration of "Race Day" and the anniversary of the discovery of America.

"I see with great satisfaction the profound significance which the peoples of Spanish-America are giving to 'Race Day'. The happy initiative of the President of Argentina in declaring a national holiday for this historic anniversary has met with echoes in other countries of Spanish root, and they will not be tardy in accepting all that has been done to make the holiday one of all the peoples of the Spanish tongue.

"These proofs of fervent love for Spain, given in critical moments to strengthen the vigor of the great Iberian family, affirm the brotherhood among all these men of the same stock to continue along the road which will carry us toward our great destinies.

"In Spain the day will be celebrated with great solemnity. It is my purpose to contribute to the great splendor of these ceremonies organized in commemoration of the great historical feat which united to the civilized world the prosperous American republics."

Discussing with La Nacion's correspondent post-war business relations between Spain and South America, King Alfonso expressed the opinion that these would enter upon a new phase. He expressed the belief that there would be closer relations between Spanish and South American financial circles, an increased interchange of products and the fortification of Spain's credit.

SAYS HYLAN WASTED CELEBRATION FUNDS

La Guardia Calls Victory Arch "Altar of Extravagance" in His Attack.

STANDS SCRAPPED, REBUILT

Candidate Criticises Architect's Commissions and Method of Letting Contracts.

The Altar of Liberty was renamed the "Altar of Extravagance," the Victory Arch "Wasteful Arch," and the Altar of Jewels the "Arch of Folly," by F. H. La Guardia, Republican candidate for President of the Board of Aldermen, in a speech last night in which he attacked the Hylan administration for "extravagant waste of the people's money" in welcoming celebrations.

Speaking to the Foresters of America, Lodge 97, at 145 West Forty-ninth Street, Mr. La Guardia accused the administration of such inefficiencies as the tearing down of stands only to erect new ones, of paying out money through the Sub-committee on Decorations for drawings "submitted to the committee and rejected by them," and of "ridiculous extravagant mannerisms such as the importation of palm leaves from Florida and specially gilding them at $1.50 a leaf."

The candidate paid his respects to the Hylan method of handling the celebrations, particularly in the matter of seats, charging that seats were erected at cost to the people of $5 cents each which were easy to get if one were a friend of the administration, otherwise almost impossible to secure." He said that a very substantial number of seats should have been turned over to families of soldiers, wounded men and sisters of the A. E. F., and the rest sold to defray the cost of erection. This, he explained, was but one instance of reckless extravagance. He cited as an example of "money literally thrown into the street" the four captive balloons placed at the Victory Arch at a total cost of $5,000.

Mr. La Guardia described the appropriation of $527,173 and the disbursement thus far of $383,935 as an orgy of recklessness, and attacked vigorously the arrangements of the city and Paul Chalfin, the architect.

"The Mayor's Committee's largest expenditure was for decorations," he said. "The Chairman of the sub-committee in charge of decorations was Paul Chalfin, appointed by the Mayor. The commission Chalfin was in charge of the letting of contracts, and, according to the committee's own record, received a 10 per cent. commission on contracts awarded. These contracts were not put up at public bidding, but awarded privately. The committee's own record regarding this percentage practice is a most deplorable confession. The man at the head of the Decorations Committee, in charge of the expenditures of public funds, was rewarded in proportion to the amount of money he spent. The more city money that gushed away, the more he would profit personally. He was more interested in conserving city funds or in gaining more personal profit. Which?

"Chalfin, for 'preparing and letting contracts 'supervision of original models, and supervision of the execution and erection of all decorations on open market orders,' received 10 per cent. of the contract price. On one series of allotments, totaling $267,873.36, he was given the $26,787.36, and was again rewarded as the recipient on a 'balance due,' amounting to $1,700, and apparently in addition to the other. It is worth noting that the appropriations by the Hylan administration were upon the Mayor's request exempted from public letting, and this exemption runs all through the course of these amazing financial operations."

NAVY ENDS SWEEPING OF NORTH SEA MINES

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PLYMOUTH, England, Oct. 12.—The units of the American Navy now in British waters, are assembling at Plymouth for overhauling, to fit them for their homeward voyage across the Atlantic. These vessels have just completed the gigantic task of sweeping up 21,000 of their mines which formed a part of the North Sea barrage from the Orkneys to Norway. The barrier was 250 miles long with an average width of 25 miles, and contained of 70,000 mines.

The sweeping up of this huge mine field began on May 10 last, and American officers say they completed in one season's work that which it was confidently expected would take two years.

They employed eighty vessels, including thirty-six sweepers, and only four out of the thirty-six sweepers escaped damage through mines exploding near.

One ship sank and Commander King and six men were lost. The commander's devotion to duty was such that the American Navy promptly named a new destroyer after him.

PLANS FOR OPENING LEAGUE LABOR BODY

MUST CONVENE IN OCTOBER

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.—Announcement was made tonight by Secretary Wilson of the Department of Labor that in view of the uncertainty as to just when the Peace Treaty would become effective and how many nations would be members of the League of Nations by Oct. 20, when the proposed International Labor Conference is set to open in Washington, the conference may merely convene and receive credentials of delegates.

The statement made in a letter from Secretary Wilson to Mr. Lansing reads:

"In view of the uncertainty as to just when the Peace Treaty will become effective and as to how many nations, if any, will be members of the League of Nations by Oct. 29, the date set for the convening of the International Labor Conference, I beg to announce that the following policy has been determined upon:

"1. The Secretary of Labor, in accordance with the call issued by the President, will open the conference at the time specified in the call, and receive the credentials of the delegates, if any are there presented.

"2. If, at the date of the opening of the conference, the treaty has become effective through ratification by the requisite number of powers and a League of Nations is in existence and properly authorized representatives of any members of such league are present at the time of the opening of the conference, the Secretary of Labor will proceed to call such conference to order and to organize it. It will then be within the province and power of the duly qualified representatives then and there present to take such adjournment, if any, that they deem wise, in order that before proceeding with the agenda a more complete membership of the league may be secured.

"3. If the treaty has not become effective by Oct. 29, or if it has no qualified representatives of members present, the Government of the United States will adjourn further steps in the organization of the conference until a date when it may be expected that sufficient duly qualified representatives of members can be present so that the organization of the conference may be perfected.

"The foregoing policy is based upon the following considerations:

"There is no provision in the treaty under the authority of which any Government or any body of representatives of any Government can postpone the conference or authorize its convocation other than in the month of October. If the conference is not convened in October it cannot be convened at all without an amendment to the treaty.

"Under the treaty, the conference has complete power to determine its own mode of procedure. If, therefore, there are any duly qualified members of the conference present when it is convened they can, under the authority given to provide for such adjournment as they may deem advisable. Under ordinary parliamentary procedure less than a quorum may adjourn a meeting from time to time until a quorum is present.

"Under the treaty the Government of the United States is given authority not only to make arrangements for convening but also for the organization of the conference. The conference has been duly called for a date within the month of October. The power to organize the conference impliedly and necessarily carries with it the power to hold the conference open until such later date as it may be possible to fully organize it. While the power to convene ends with the convocation of the conference, which must, under the treaty, take place in October, the power to organize is a continuing power which is not specifically limited in the treaty and necessarily must last on until such time as the conference is sufficiently organized with qualified members to be able to take over the direction of its own procedure."

ITALIAN DELEGATE SAILS.

Baron Mayor des Planches Interested in Immigration Restrictions.

NAPLES, Oct. 11.—Baron Mayor des Planches, former Italian Ambassador to the United States and now Commissioner General of Emigration, sailed today on board the steamship Giuseppe Verdi for New York. He will head the Italian delegation to the International Labor Conference in Washington.

In the general discussion of Italy's view on the labor situation, Baron Mayor des Planches will especially deal with the question of reported restrictions on emigration to the United States.

DEMANDS BY SUIT WORKERS

Union Will Ask a Nationwide Increase in Wages.

The Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America will this week place demands before the National Industrial Federation of Clothing Manufacturers for its members in New York City, Chicago, Rochester and Baltimore. It is the plan of the union when an agreement has been reached with the Federation for these four cities, to present demands with the clothing manufacturers of Boston, Philadelphia, Milwaukee, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Louisville, Utica, and other cities where the clothing workers are organized in the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

The demands for Chicago, the first to be prepared, include a wage increase of $6 a week and wage scales as follows: Cutters, $45; sponsers, $40; trimmers, $40; tailors, $40; bushelmen, $40; women bushelers, $30; examiners, $40; miscellaneous operators, $40; general operators, $45. In addition to the wage demands the organization asks for the creation of an unemployment fund to provide for the support of workers during the slack season. It is provided that the employers pay an equivalent of five per cent. of workers' wages to the unemployment fund.

Laundry Strike Unchanged.

The strike of laundry workers will enter its second week this morning with the situation practically unchanged from a week ago, according to representatives of the steam laundries. The employers are standing out against the closed shop.

Report Magyar Army on Way To Oust Rumanians in Capital

PARIS, Oct. 12.—A dispatch to the Petit Parisien from Vienna says a "white" Magyar army, under command of Admiral Horby, is reported to be marching on Budapest with the intention of expelling the Rumanians.

Former Emperor Charles, says the dispatch, is reported to be making preparations to join Horby.

The tenor of the note which the allied Governments have decided to hand Rumania through their Ministers at Bucharest is moderate and conciliatory, according to the Havas Agency. It reviews the points on which differences exist, and explains the reasons why the clause relating to minorities was inserted in the treaty.

The note says that the question of Rumanian requisition on Hungary will be submitted to a special commission, and declared that the Allies do not regard the Friedrich Government in Hungary as representing the will of the Hungarian nation.

Further, the note points out the difficulties of the situation caused by Rumania's failure to sign the Austrian Peace Treaty.

DR. RYAN CONDEMNS LABOR RADICALISM

Longshoremen, Printers, and Steel Workers Criticised by Catholic University Professor.

ALSO ATTACKS JUDGE GARY

Says Refusal to Deal with Representatives of Unions Is an "Unreasonable Attitude."

The "radicalism of labor and the autocracy of capital" were discussed last night by the Rev. Dr. John A. Ryan, Professor of Sociology in the Catholic University, Washington, at the Columbus Day meeting of the New York Chapter, Knights of Columbus, held in Carnegie Hall. Dr. Harry P. Swift presided, and other speakers were Bainbridge Colby and Judge William D. Cunningham.

"The radicalism of labor," said Dr. Ryan, "is excessive today in three ways. It violates contracts, as in the strike of the printers and longshoremen in New York. It demands impossible advantages, as when the coal miners and some other groups contend for a 6-hour day and a five-day week. And it abuses its present power through a lack of reasonable moderation in pressing demands that are otherwise legitimate, as in the case of the steel strike and several others.

"The autocracy of capital consists essentially in the refusal to allow to others a reasonable share of influence in determining mutual relations and conditions that affect both parties. A typical and crucial instance of this is the position of Mr. Gary in relation to his organized employes. He refuses to deal with their accredited representatives. This is an unreasonable attitude, because collective bargaining through the representatives of the union is necessary in order in justice for the workers. They are too weak to attain this and by individual bargaining or even through bargaining by separate groups in particular establishments.

Professor Ryan took up Judge Gary's testimony before the Senate Committee and, citing the Steel Corporation's contention that Foster and Fitzpatrick did not represent a majority of the employes, said the data were not sufficient reason for declining to discuss the grievances of the minority.

"In the first place," continued Professor Ryan, he strives to evade the criticism that he refuses to men the right to organize by saying that they may join unions if they like, but that he will not deal with their organizations. This is flippant and cruel. He knows very well that a union which is not permitted to bargain with employers is about as effective and useful for labor as a sewing circle or a tea party. His main defense of his position is that dealing with the union leads inevitably to the closed shop, and that this means a great injury to industry and to the public welfare."

Attempting to disprove the contention of Judge Gary, Dr. Ryan pointed out industries where the "closed shop" prevailed and where no injury had occurred, and added: "Even though collective bargaining always resulted in the 'closed shop' and the latter always led to a lessening of production, the vital question is whether this is a worse evil than to leave the workers defenseless, at the mercy of the employers."

The clergyman characterized Judge Gary's refusal to arbitrate "moral principles," as something "which is clearly indefensible."

Discussing the principles advanced by the employers' group at the industrial conference now in progress in Washington, the priest said they contained some encouraging features, but on the recognition of unions "were disappointing."

"Recognition of the right of collective bargaining," said he in conclusion, "and more production are two things that are essential to better industrial relations. Other things that are needed are the participation of labor in industrial management and a share in the surplus profits. Both of these latter suggestions will tend to increased production, and until these ends are attained labor will commit industrial suicide if it gives up the policy of collective bargaining through the unions."

Outlining the things for which America stood, Bainbridge Colby said: "There are men in our midst who have no respect for America. They are men who are abusing our hospitality. These men, I say, must be put down. The time is coming when the rising temper of America will not deal with these pestilent persons in a mincing manner. When organizations are permitted to exist which openly advocate the overthrow of our Government, it is time for men to speak out like men and not in the balanced phrases of anaemic idealism."

While Mr. Colby was speaking, Governor Alfred E. Smith and Mrs. Smith entered an upper tier box and were greeted with three cheers. Judge Cunningham spoke of the opportunities of America.

President of Pressmen's Union Says They Spread Labor Unrest.

THE PLAY

By Alexander Woollcott

A Festival of Memory.

A festival of memory was held last evening at the Century Theatre, when the members of the Actors' Fidelity League gave a benefit performance partly to fill their coffers, and partly, it may be guessed from the length of the program, to tell the world how many of the prominent players remained outside the Actors' Equity Association during the late unpleasantness in the theatre.

The scheme was to show in a succession of vignettes a score and more of old favorites in roles which found favor for them in other seasons. So once more the Lady of Quality crossed swords with Sir John Oxen, Bessie McCoy sang the charming ditty about the Yama Yama man, Aggie Lynch fenced gullefully with the Police Inspector, Mary Ryan swooned away in "On Trial," Edna Wallace Hopper ventured boldly to sing the "Tact" song from "Florodora," Bothern's "Hamlet" drove his sword through the arras, Ina Claire relapsed into the demureness of the "Quaker Girl," and "Tess of the d'Urbervilles," with the forces of the law closing in around her, saw the sun rise once more over Stonehenge.

The sun rose at about 12:30 this morning, and it was quite that when, as the final number, Mr. Cohan's nose tingled once more to the refrain of "Give My Regards to Broadway." Even to and the long program then required a good deal of stern cutting, and it may be guessed that the half dozen omissions were due to this rather than to the usual eleventh hour excuses offered upon such occasions.

It was an evening of mingled emotions, of pleasant memories, and, on the other hand, revivals better described as resurrections. For instance, you might have forgotten how altogether delightful Grace George was as Cyprienne in "Divorçons." Then again, it does not seem possible that the climax of Clyde Fitch's once much applauded "The Climbers," which Amelia Bingham rashly revived in the excitement last evening, could have been quite so terrible when it was first played nearly twenty years ago.

But these were not all. There was Holbrook Blinn, who forgot all about his great success in "Salvation Neil" and revived a moment in "The Duchess of Dantzic" for reasons not explained; Thomas E. Shea, who did a spotlit moment from Irving's great role in "The Bells;" Ralph Herz, doing his devilish song in "The Soul Kiss;" a mixed company resuscitating a few moments from "Trilby;" Billy Burke going way back through the years to last season to play "The Marriage of Convenience," and Otis Skinner flashing back with some of his fine performance as Mister Antonio.

There were such incredible mixtures as Margaret Anglin's superb embodiment of the Medea and Louis Mann's dialect in "The Telephone Girl." And then Henry Miller did a far, far better thing than he has ever done since Sidney Carton. The girl in the final scene was not identified on the program and the stage was dimly lighted, but it sounded ever so much like Ruth Chatterton, and maybe it was.

Of course, it was all pretty tedious, but it was run off with commendable smoothness and there was only one misadventure. The electrician was probably strangled to death at a late hour last night by Blanche Bates, who, as Du Barry in "The Darling of the Gods," was left prostrate on the platform in a blaze of light, from which she was forced to rise and hobble away as best she could, in full view of a sympathetic audience. Well, very likely the electrician had union sympathies. You never can tell.

The series of revivals was preceded by a lot of miscellaneous vaudeville, with Nora Bayes enchanting at her loudest, Irving Berlin singing several of his own songs, Maurice and Walton dancing and Mr. Collier and Mr. Conan hopping about once more in their "Here we are, together again" song and several broad intimations that neither of them is done with us yet.

HARRIS TO PRODUCE COHAN'S NEW COMEDY

"Queed," by George Hazelton, and "Mrs. Hope's Husband," by Scarborough, in List.

Announcement of the retirement of George M. Cohan as a theatrical producer, made by Mr. Cohan last week, was followed yesterday by a statement from Sam H. Harris, his partner, listing the plays that he will produce alone after Mr. Cohan's withdrawal from the firm.

The first offering of Mr. Harris as an individual producer will be "The Haunted Violin," a fantastic comedy by Crane Wilbur, well-known as a motion picture actor. "The Haunted Violin" will be produced in Atlantic City on Nov. 6, with the author in the leading role.

Mr. Harris will also produce "Welcome, Stranger," a comedy by Aaron Hoffmann, which has already been tried on the road, and which Mr. Cohan is said to have rewritten.

Dramatizations of "Mrs. Hope's Husband," a story by Gelett Burgess, and of "Queed," Henry Sydnor Harrison's novel, are also scheduled by Mr. Harris. More than a year ago it was announced that Mr. Cohan would dramatize these stories, but George Scarborough and George Hazelton are now named as the respective playwrights.

In addition to Mr. Cohan's new comedy, Mr. Harris will present "The Way to Heaven," an Oriental fantasy by Earl Carroll; "Home Again," a comedy by Thomas Louden; "Prince Ferdy," a comedy by Frances Hill and John T. McIntyre; "The Beautiful One," a musical comedy by Reginold Wolf and Louis A. Hirsch, and "Going Some," a musical version of the farce by Rex Beach and Paul Armstrong, to be made by Otto Harbach and Louis A. Hirsch.

"The Acquittal," a drama by Rita Weiman, is now playing in Chicago, and will presently be brought to New York. Attractions which Mr. Harris will continue on tour will be Mrs. Fiske in "Mis' Nelly of N'Orleans," "A Prince There Was" (two companies), "Going Up," (two companies,) "Three Faces East," and "A Tailor-Made Man."

WELCOME TOSCHA SEIDEL.

Carnegie Hall Crowded at Return of Young Russian Violinist.

Toscha Seidel, a temperamental Russian violinist, youngest of a famous group, who made his first public appearances here last season, was welcomed by a large audience on his return to Carnegie Hall yesterday afternoon. He has matured in the brief months since his début, having acquired a repose of manner that contrasts with his former boyish eagerness upon the stage. With Harry Kaufman at the piano, he was heard in Grieg's sonata in C minor, and in a concerto in E minor, by Jules Conus. At the close of an enjoyable program, the crowd flocked toward the stage for still more encores.

Among the violinist's shorter pieces were Beethoven's "Romance" in G, an arrangement by Kreisler of the Paderewski "Minuet," Achron's "Sicilienne," Sarasate's "Habanera," and the D major "Polonaise" of Wieniawski.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

"The Gaieties of 1919" will end their run at the Winter Garden next week and "The Passing Show of 1919" will be produced there on Thursday night, Oct. 23.

Richard Barbee and Claire Mesereau have been engaged for Dorothy Donnelly's play, "Forbidden," in which Mirtha Redman will have the leading role.

A benefit performance in aid of Greenwich House will take place at the Selwyn Theatre next Sunday night. On the program will be Raymond Hitchcock, Bessie McCoy Davis, Irene Bordoni, Gitz Rice, Harry Fox, Tom Powers, Marie Carroll, Otto Kruger, Jack Hazzard, and others.

The Caravan Theatre, a newly organized group of players, will produce Shaw's new short play, "The Bolshevik Empress." The first performances of the Caravan Theatre will be held in Philadelphia.

Ibsen's "When We Dead Awaken" is announced for its "first American performances" at the Neighborhood Playhouse soon by Leigh Lovel and Octavia Kenmore.

Marcus Loew is to build his tenth Brooklyn picture house at Bay Ridge Avenue and Fifth Street. It will seat 2,700.

THE SCREEN

Will Rogers's personality penetrates through lenses and film to the screen. Rogers in motion pictures is not Rogers himself, with his chewing gum, rope, and conversation, but there is a thoroughly delightful person in a photoplay called "Almost a Husband," at the Strand this week, who will be recognized as the former star of the Midnight Frolic. For one thing, Rogers is genuine in everything he does, and genuineness counts for as much on the screen as on the stage, and, furthermore, he is by no means an insignificant actor. Cast in a part that fits him, he puts meaning into his playing, so that it is playing, and not just posing. His part in "Almost a Husband" fits him. He is the school teacher, lawyer, author, and emergency husband of Opie Read's "Old Ebenezer," from which the photoplay was derived, and the character takes on life through his impersonation. To Director Clarence G. Badger should be given credit for not forcing Rogers out of his natural rôle. He would not, for instance, seem right in protracted love scenes, and, although he becomes quite, rather than almost, a husband, there is no billing and cooing until the final fade-out, and this is beautifully brief.

Some may know, and others may not, that the story is about a New England school teacher imported into a village on the Mississippi River. He is instinctively a philanthropist, and, after saving a poor family from disaster, rescues the leading banker's daughter from an undesired suitor. At a party he goes through a mock wedding ceremony with her, and then discovers that it was valid. He gallantly offers to free the girl, but when he learns that she is safe from the villain as long as she is married to him, he as gallantly volunteers to remain her husband. The rest of the story is concerned with the unsuccessful efforts of the villain and his accomplices to get him unmarried.

The chief interest of the photoplay is in the characterisation by Rogers and the performance of Peggy Wood and Herbert Standing, who play the banker and his daughter.

For once, spectators also enjoy some of the sub-titles flashed on the screen, which are surely from Rogers himself.

The Rivoli is all comedy this week and starts, after the overture, with another Briggs comedy, "Saturday," fully as amusing and as true to the boyhood of a generation ago as "Company."

Then comes a screen version of George Broadhurst's farce, "Why Smith Left Home," in which love triumphs over family interference, a train wreck, a fire, an earthquake, and the blunders of friends. Bryant Washburn has the leading rôle, and Lois Wilson is the girl. Mame Kelso, Winter Hall, Walter Hiers, Margaret Loomis, and Carrie Clark Ward are the others in the cast. Donald Crisp directed the production. Altogether, they succeeded in making the picture diverting. It would be more diverting, however, if there were not so much of it.

"Why Divorce?" another comedy, with Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Haven in practically the only parts, is intermittently funny.

Augustus Thomas's old melodrama, "In Missoura," has been made into a photoplay by Beulah Marie Dix as scenario writer and Hugh Ford as director. Robert Warwick has the leading rôle, and he is supported by a well-chosen cast including Robert Cain, Noah Beery, Eileen Percy, Monte Blue, and Milla Davenport. It is at the Rialto this week.

The plot revolves about familiar types, the simple (though in the present case not simple minded) strong man, the misled beautiful girl, and the villainous "slick city feller." It has what the trade calls "heart stuff," and ends in a succession of fights, which give it plenty of "punch." Despite its too familiar faces, however, the photoplay will be found enjoyable by many, because the things done so often are well done, and Warwick is not the usual hero who invariably makes every one hope that the villain will win. He seems sincere and unconscious of the camera.

"Amid Peaceful Scenes," a charming Post Nature Picture, set off by well selected quotations from poems by Rupert Brooke, Joyce Kilmer, and others, and accompanied by an ensemble from the New School of Opera, adds greatly to the entertainment value of the Rialto program.

"A Scream in the Night" remains at the Broadway.

Aida and Kingston Act a "Boheme" Finale to Hippodrome Throng.

The Metropolitan Opera Quartet made its formal bow last night to this metropolis, not on the stars' home stage, but instead at the Hippodrome, where the Van Hugo Society mustered a vast throng that left little space on the big platform for the four singers themselves. Two artists of the original four were missing, the baritone, De Luca, being replaced by Thomas Chalmers, and the tenor, Charles Hackett, by Morgan Kingston. The popular crowd frankly hissed an announcement of the second indisposition.

Mr. Kingston quickly won its applause, however, and when he and Mme. Alda encored a "Butterfly" duet with the first act finale from "La Bohème," walking off stage arm-in arm, the house made them come back and do it again. Mr. Chalmers and Miss Carolina Lazzari were as heartily received in a duet from "Favorita." A long program included many other operatic excerpts, the only one missing being the "Lucia" sextet, which was to have been sung in a "quartet arrangement," wisely abandoned.

Wilkie Bard, Comedian, Arrives.

Wilkie Bard, an English comedian who succeeded the late Dan Leno as the favorite music hall and pantomime artist with the British public, arrived here yesterday on the Cunarder Saxonia to fill a vaudeville engagement. He has acted at Drury Lane Theatre, London, as principal artist in the Christmas pantomimes, and he appeared some years ago in this city at the Victoria Music Hall, operated by the late Oscar Hammerstein. In private life he devotes his spare time to collecting Egyptian scarabs and growing roses.

MUSIC

Galli-Curci and Prokofieff.

The Italian War Relief Fund was the means of bringing Mme. Galli-Curci to the stage of the Metropolitan Opera House yesterday afternoon for the first time, even though it was in that form of entertainment known as a song recital. There was an audience doubtless large enough to benefit the fund materially, though it did not entirely fill the house, for which various causes might be conjectured, or a combination of several, none of them implying a loss of public interest in the singer.

She sang charmingly yesterday afternoon, unaffectedly, with beauty of tone and nicety of execution. She was in "good voice," and gave pleasure, obviously, though she did not rouse to the wildest enthusiasm. She sang two of her operatic stalking horses, "Ah non credea," from "La Sonnambula," and the "mad scene" from "Lucia." The rest of the program was made up of songs by older and more modern masters—not a particularly interesting or skillfully grouped assemblage for lovers of the song literature, nor yet for those whose affection is centred on Mme. Galli-Curci's special field of the opera. It gave a pleasing view, however, of more than one side of the singer's power, and her singing was highly appreciated. She was liberal in dispensing encores.

Manuel Berenger played the indispensable flute obbligato in the scene of Lucia's madness and in Benedict's song, "The Wren." The accompanist was Homer Samuels, who was also the composer of one of Mme. Galli-Curci's English songs, "When Chloris Sleeps."

At the close of one of her groups, in the middle of the program, Robert Underwood Johnson appeared on the stage, also in good voice, and made a little speech thanking the singer, for the assistance she had given to the fund, of which he is President.

Sergei Prokofieff, the Russian pianist, reappeared before an audience in which his own countrymen were numerous in Aeolian Hall yesterday afternoon. His program was an unusual one, in an interesting way bringing forward Bach's French suite in G, one of his compositions, small in dimension but rich in charm, and three "Country Dances" by Beethoven, also among the minimal productions of the master in size but ingratiatingly tuneful, both of which it has occurred to very few pianists to produce in public. There were Mkowtze Schumann's sonata in F sharp minor and a group of five short pieces by the concert giver.

Mr. Prokofieff can roar as gently as a sucking dove when he chooses, and he chose yesterday. He played Bach's melodious suite with simplicity and grace such as belong to it; only his tempos in the fast movements were too fast, sometimes to such an extent that the outlines were blurred. That is one of the frequent disadvantages of a proficient modern pianist's performance of things simple, in at least form, if not in content. And he found delightful expression for Beethoven's little pieces. His own compositions caused no terror among the hall full of listeners. They are short pieces, each with a not uninteresting cachet of its own, but going not very far in significance, nor apparently intended to, and certainly not daring more greatly in dissonance or harshness than the productions of many who write in modern idiom. Not even the "Suggestion Diabolique" was suggestive beyond limits acceptable in polite society. Mr. Prokofieff played them with much vigor.

USE JUDGMENT IN SELECTING YOUR INVESTMENTS

EXPERTS are of the opinion that bonds of real intrinsic merit purchased around present prices are practically certain to sell considerably higher within the next few years. The question, therefore, is not so much whether you should buy now, as it is that you use the proper amount of judgment in making selections. Should you wish us to submit to you a list of diversified investments, we would be glad to do so, following out your ideas as to type and geographical location as closely as possible.

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION

Stock Market Strength Reflects Confidence in Solution of Current Problems

If sentiment were uncertain in respect to the country's manufacturing and business prospects, there could have been hardly the sort of a stock market that was witnessed last week. Current episodes of strikes, lockouts, and the repudiation of authorized leadership by radical labor groups were submerged in the market's far-seeing conception of normal activities later on and in the expectation that the demand for goods of all sorts would prove to be merely held in abeyance by strikes, not destroyed or driven to outside sources of supply. The average quotation for a broad and comprehensive group of industrial stocks advanced 5 points; the average quotation for a mixed selection of industrial and railroad stocks moved forward approximately 3 points. Many new high records for the year were established. Sharp bulges of certain high-priced shares, notably of automobile and petroleum companies, denoted a marked scarcity of supply for the time being at least. A stiff cost for carrying stocks on margin, resultant from call money rates, which ranged in the main from 8 to 12 per cent., troubled the traders not at all. The extraordinary progress of a few shares brought forth a natural condemnation from conservative followers of security dealings, yet it was hardly within the province of the casual critic to assert that manipulation of the brazen order was responsible in the main for the gains. It might have been otherwise if the entire industrial list had not been buoyant. If the market had not broadened out in a fashion not seen since the Summer advance came to an end in July. The factors which promoted speculative operations were not altogether clear, and the comment of brokerage offices disclosed, perhaps, too much faith in a continued rise which made too little reference to underlying economic factors. The long-range vision of prosperous business conditions is an excellent incentive to buy and hold stocks, but experience has shown that the "long pull" is nearly always accompanied by sharp fluctuations of uncomfortable import to overzealous speculators. One of the tangible influences of the week lay in the Department of Agriculture's report on the grain crops. It showed that the probable wheat yield had not declined, in net terms, during September. From one aspect this might be considered a negative sort of comfort to the farmers and the localities depending upon the receipts for farm products for their new wealth and business activities. Yet a production of 918,400,000 bushels, which now seems assured, will rank second only to the great yield of 1915, and the proceeds at the arranged price will be far in excess of those of the record year. As an offsetting factor to the shrinkage of the wheat crop from the 1,220,000,000 bushel total called for in the June estimates, stands the highly favorable progress of the corn crop, the increase in the predicted yield during the favorable days of September being 42,000,000 bushels, and the aggregate output now promised amounting to close to 3,000,000,000 bushels. Reckoned in terms of beef, pork, and other meats, as well as the primary monetary value, the crop of corn indicates both stable prices for important food materials next year and a great exportable surplus.

The National Industrial Conference carried a knotty problem over to this week's session, supplied by the resolution of the group of labor representatives that a committee be appointed to settle the steel strike. The decision on this suggestion and on the resolution of the employers' group in support of open-shop practice promises to supply the framework upon which will be hung all the efficacious results of the convention. Mr. Gompers's move to save some of the remains of a dying strike was of the strategic order, and the subsequent firm assertions by the employer delegates indicated that the steel strike is the impelling influence behind the deliberations to date. It is to be said that labor demonstrations as last week ended were such as to weaken and not strengthen the presentation of labor's claims at the conference. The walk-out of longshoremen at New York brought forward once more the predilection of a great many organized workers to defy their leaders and ignore contracts and agreements, and even arrangements to abide by findings by arbitration. Still, the country is counting upon concrete results from the meeting, results which are hoped to be of a calibre to point the way to a general amelioration of relations between capital and labor, and this being so it is hardly conceivable that a deadlock over any question could obtain for long, nor is it likely that any party will abruptly abandon the negotiations.

If Germany is to make satisfactory progress during the next few years in meeting indemnity payments she must rapidly expand her commercial operations with other nations. No deep economic principle is expounded in this statement, it is merely a logical aspect of the present situation, based on the principle that, since Germany cannot pay fully in gold and acceptable securities, she must pay in goods and services. At least one French political leader has gone further than to make general application of this thought. Raoul Peret, Vice President of the Chamber of Deputies, would have French manufacturers buy raw materials of Germany in quantity—in an interview on Friday he suggested that "all" raw materials be bought of their quondam enemy for a time—not only for the purpose of hastening indemnity disbursements but also to facilitate the activity of French mills and factories. Sentiment would doubtless oppose such a step, oppose it vigorously, but it would be faced by the ramparts of cold commercial and financial facts. German exchange is greatly depreciated at Paris, thus favoring the cheap importation of German goods. French exchange is much below the normals past yet at New York and London, thus impeding French imports from the allied countries. There have already been numerous instances cited of successful bids by German firms in neutral countries for materials and finished products, bids made in competition with American and British producers. The lesson to be drawn from Mr. Peret's position is that American bankers and exporters need to make easier than at present French purchases in this country, through adequate credits, lest a lot of business expected to come here in the natural course of events be taken by others.

The peak of Government expenditure in liquidating the war cost was reached in midwinter, but it is gratifying to record a steady decline in the outlay. The Treasury reports that payments in the first ten days of the current month were about $196,000,000 less than in the corresponding period of last year. At this rate the full month will show a contraction of close to $600,000,000 compared with October, 1918.

Prairie Pipe Line Company

I.

The Company is engaged solely in the transportation of oil in the States of Kansas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Texas, Missouri and Illinois. Its vast network of gathering lines in connection with other pipe line systems deliver the bulk of Mid-Continent crude to the Atlantic seaboard and Gulf ports.

The Company operates more than 6,000 miles of gathering and trunk lines, 3,000 miles of private telegraph lines, 90 main pumping stations and 60 field pumping stations. Its gathering lines have a capacity in excess of 200,000 barrels daily and will be increased to 250,000 barrels when the Texas lines are finished. (Continued.)

ROADS CAN'T MEET TRAFFIC DEMANDS

Facilities Have Not Expanded to the Extent Required, Says Hines.

DEPRIVED OF WARTIME AIDS

Railroad Administration Paying Particular Attention to Handling of Coal and Grain.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.—Walker D. Hines, Director General of Railroads, in a statement tonight dealing with the shortage in rail transportation, asserted that the railroads were now doing heavier business for the season of the year than ever in their history in "normal years." While they had more cars in actual operation, on the other hand the railroads were deprived of some of the important advantages which they enjoyed last year, and their facilities were decidedly below what the traffic demands.

"The railroads of the country," said Mr. Hines, "are now doing a heavier business for the present season of the year than was ever done in the history of the railroads in normal years, and practically as heavy business as was done at this season in 1918, which exceeded all previous records. They have more cars in actual service, after excluding cars held out of service for repairs, than in 1917 or 1918. While the bad order car situation was greatly embarrassed by the extensive strikes among shopmen in August, the percentage of bad order cars is now rapidly improving.

"There was an increase of 52,456 cars in serviceable condition between Aug. 15 and Oct. 4; 12,110 of this increase were added in the one week ending Oct. 4.

"While the freight business is practically as heavy as at this time last year, the Railroad Administration in performing that business is unavoidably deprived of many exceedingly important aids which it was able to utilize last year, one of these is the zoning of coal, which last year compelled consumers to take their coal from nearby mines, and thereby greatly increased the efficiency of coal transportation. This advantage has necessarily been lost, because the coal zoning was terminated last Winter. Another is that last year there was much heavier loading of many important commodities than it has been possible to secure this year, and the result is that under existing conditions more cars have to be used for the same amount of traffic than were used last year. There are various other important respects in which traffic as controlled in the interest of the war last year, so as to get the maximum results out of rail transportation, and with the return of peace conditions, and the resulting insistence of public sentiment upon release from wartime restrictions, these advantages have been lost.

"The fact that there is still a shortage in rail transportation is due to the condition that the amount of business offering is far in excess of the transportation facilities of the country. This has always been true in this country in times of heavy business in the Autumn months, except last year, when the matter could be and was controlled with an iron hand with a view solely to war necessities.

"At the same time railroad facilities have not expanded to the extent required in the public interest. Even prior to the war railroad facilities were not equal to the demands. During the war the addition of new facilities was greatly restricted by scarcity of material and labor. Since the war it has been impossible to enter upon or carry out any extensive program for enlargement of railroad capacity, because of the uncertainty as to the status of the railroads. The Railroad Administration was not provided with the money, and therefore could not originate or carry out any such program. The railroad companies, in view of the uncertainty, were unwilling to provide the money.

"The result is that the railroad facilities of the country are decidedly below what the traffic demands. Nevertheless, the maximum traffic is being handled, and this is being done with less shortage of transportation than manifested itself at times in the pre-war period.

"Particular attention is being paid by the Railroad Administration to the furnishing of necessary equipment for transportation of coal and of grain. It was decided early in September that, in order to meet the coal requirements of the country, it would be necessary for the railroads to move a minimum of 11,000,000 tons of bituminous coal a week. For the week ended Sept. 13, 11,046,000 tons were transported. For the week ended Sept. 20, 11,248,000 tons were transported, and for the week ended Sept. 27 the Railroad Administration estimates that approximately 11,595,000 tons were transported.

"Conditions have developed which have made it necessary to handle the wheat situation in an emergency way. This situation has been complicated by the fact that many of the elevators are full, and it has been impracticable to move additional wheat to points where the elevators are full, because to do so would cause large numbers of railroad cars to be filled with grain which could not to be disposed of at destination, and this would result in practically taking such cars out of the transportation service and using them for storage and depriving the public generally of cars which are badly needed for business of every sort. The Railroad Administration is following this matter very vigorously in consultation with the Grain Corporation, and the Director General will consider the matter personally at a meeting of interested railroad officers, representatives of the Grain Corporation, and others to be held at Chicago this week.

"As to the situation in Texas, where the wheat conditions are particularly acute because the crop is approximately 25,000,000 bushels larger than last year, and where there is a scarcity of local storage facilities, arrangements are being made through the Grain Corporation for the sending of additional cargo vessels to Galveston and arrangements have already been made for increasing the number of permits for carloads of wheat into Galveston from 50 to 100 per day. Particular efforts are being made to move wheat which is on the ground and is thus exposed to the weather.

HOUSING BUREAU FAVORED.

Merchants' Association Approves Bill Before Congress.

The Merchants' Association, upon the recommendation of its Committee on Housing, of which Burt L. Fenner of McKim, Mead & White is Chairman, is urging the passage of a bill pending in the House which creates a Bureau of Housing and Living Conditions in the Department of Labor and appropriates $250,000. The association's Board of Directors unanimously approved the report of the committee, which said in part:

"The functions of this bureau are to investigate housing and living conditions and to collect and make available all possible information in regard to the elimination of slums, improvement of living conditions, reduction of cost of construction of dwellings and financing home-building operations.

"In the opinion of the committee, the creation of such a bureau would perpetuate and make available a vast amount of valuable data compiled by the various housing agencies of the Government during the war. Furthermore, the activities of such a bureau would prove to be very beneficial, especially in presenting the serious aspects of housing problems and methods of solution to Congress, Government officials and other persons interested in the matter."

TO DISCUSS FOREIGN TRADE.

Manufacturers' Export Association Also Will Consider Consular Reorganization.

The tenth annual convention of the American Manufacturers' Export Association will be held Thursday and Friday of this week at the Waldorf. One of the topics scheduled for discussion will be the question of reorganizing our diplomatic and consular service with a view to increased efficiency. On this subject William G. Sharp, former American ambassador to France, will be the principal speaker. There will also be a discussion Thursday on the possibilities in our future trade with Russia. Trade with Germany will be discussed in several papers, and the Near East also will receive consideration.

On Friday the first discussion will be concerning our diplomatic service. That day, also, the question of establishing a system of credits to be extended to concerns in foreign lands to help them in transacting business in the United States will be taken up. Speakers at the dinner Friday night will include Maurice Casenave, French High Commissioner; Colonel J. C. Faunthorpe of the British Embassy; Rear Admiral Count Lovatelli of the Italian Embassy, and William Phillips, First Assistant Secretary of State.

BALTIC TRADE GROWING.

Large Orders for American Goods Placed by Firms in Denmark.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 11.—Copenhagen at present is being visited by a great number of American merchants and manufacturers, and huge orders are placed for American goods for Danish consumption and re-export to Norway, Sweden, Finland, Poland and the Baltic States.

Speaking to a representative of a leading Copenhagen journal, Frank A. Crabb, a Chicago exporter, said:

"Copenhagen is the only natural distribution centre for Baltic trade. This is the psychological moment for Denmark and America to find one another in profitable commercial co-operation, and Copenhagen is bound to be the most important North European harbor."

John Gleason of Rochester is following Henry Ford's example and erecting a motor works in Denmark for supplying Scandinavian and Baltic markets.

COMPLETES REPORT ON RECONSTRUCTION

Recommendations of Commission Now Ready for Governor and the Public.

MARLING DEFENDS PROGRAM

Denies Proposed Changes Would Weaken Legislature and Make Governor the "Whole Thing."

Announcement was made yesterday by the Reconstruction Commission that its report on retrenchment and reorganization in the State Government has been revised in some particulars, as a result of criticism and suggestions offered in a public hearing, Sept. 24, and memoranda filed afterward.

The revised report is ready to go to the Governor and copies are being printed for general distribution. The Commission expects several months of consideration and discussion before the program goes to the Legislature.

The Commission has received many helpful suggestions, and the great majority of all comment from individual citizens, civic agencies, chambers of commerce, heads of departments, and leaders of parties has been favorable. Alfred E. Marling, Chairman of the commission's Committee on Retrenchment, said yesterday:

"Some comments, evidently inspired, imply that Governor Smith proposes to terminate most of the commissions, and to make the Governor the 'whole thing'; that if our plan were adopted the Legislature might as well be paid off and dismissed; that there are too many commissions, but that the remedy should not be the substitution for them of concentrated autocratic power.

"The answer to this is that the legislators in a number of States, including a State as large as Illinois, have adopted just such plans as are proposed by the Reconstruction Commission. Far from taking away the power and dignity of the Legislature, the new program has immensely improved relations between the Legislature and the Executive. It has made the Governor the head of the Administration, and has left the legislators more free to deal with important matters of policy.

"The commission points out that the present plan is not by any means identical with the plan proposed by the Constitutional Convention in 1915. Moreover, the constitution then proposed was not beaten because of its plan for reorganizing the State Government. It was beaten because all kinds of impossible and undesirable matters were presented to the people at the same time without adequate explanation.

"Many persons opposed it because of the apportionment articles, others because of the forest reserve provisions or food provisions. It is worth pointing out that the suffrage amendment was beaten by a considerable majority recently, and then approved by a substantial majority shortly afterward.

"Some claims are made regarding our report that it is proposed to place laymen or politicians at the head of technical departments, such as the Department of Health, etc. There is no such recommendation in the report. Its intention is that there shall be technical men at the heads of these departments. It provides that a number of department heads who are now appointed by the Governor, and who need not be technical men, shall be technical men chosen from civil service lists.

"The proposed plan greatly reduces the patronage of the Governor. Excepting boards of managers of institutions, who are unpaid, and honorary officials, who will have, perhaps, one-fifth of the appointments that he now has. All department heads are to be appointed with consent of the Senate.

"The engineering recommendations have been indorsed by a committee of five of the leading engineers of the country, appointed by the Engineering Council, one from each of the great engineering societies."

RED CROSS TELLS OF WORK.

Sent 218,310,000 Pounds of Supplies Abroad in 27 Months.

The amount of American Red Cross relief material, reaching a total of almost 2,000,000 packages, which flowed across the Atlantic—particularly from the Port of New York—and across the Pacific during America's participation in the war and after the armistice is revealed in statistics made public yesterday at Roll Call headquarters. The report says:

"These supplies shipped in crates, barrels, or bundles, between April 1, 1917, and July 1, 1919, reached a total weight of 218,310,000 pounds, and were distributed in twenty-one countries from ships leaving the ten ports used by the Red Cross. In addition, the Red Cross bought large stores of material in countries where its operations for soldiers and afflicted civilians were carried on.

"The heaviest shipments were through the Port of New York, from which 74,603 net tons were sent to the Balkans, Denmark, England, France, Guatemala, Hayti, Italy, Madagascar, Palestine, Poland, Rumania, Russia, Dom'nican Republic, Switzerland, Virgin Islands, Greece, Serbia, Uruguay, and Belgium. Baltimore was the second port in the volume of shipments, with a total of 17,103 tons, forwarded to France, the Balkans, England, Italy, and Switzerland. The totals from other ports were: Boston, 1,023 tons to England and France; Montreal, 151 tons to France; New Orleans, 2,371 tons to France; New York, Italy and Porto Rico; Norfolk, 2,129 tons to France and the Madeira Islands; Philadelphia, 1,408 tons to France and Italy; San Francisco, 5,250 tons to France, Italy, Manila, and Siberia; Seattle, 1,534 tons to France, Italy, and Siberia."

TO SPEAK OF PRISON WORK.

Sir Alfred Davis Will Address Committee on Prisons Tonight.

Sir Alfred Davies, the member of the British Board of Education, who developed the educational work for English prisoners of war, will deliver an address on this work at a meeting tonight of the National Committee on Prisons and Prison Labor at the home of Adolph Lewisohn, 881 Fifth Avenue.

Sir Alfred is representing the British Government on a special mission to this country, and on his return to England will assist in drafting for the civil prisoners of England the same educational courses which were so helpful to the men interned in Germany.

Dr. Mary Gordon, British inspector of prisons, will speak on "The Methods of Caring for Women Prisoners in England." Dr. Gordon is in attendance at the international conference of women physicians and many of the physicians attending the conference will attend this evening's meeting.

FRENCH INCOME TAX JUMP.

Exceeded Largely in 1918 Returns for 1917 and 1916 Combined.

PARIS, Oct. 12.—The income tax in France amounted to 712,000,000 francs in 1918, according to the report published in the Journal Officiel today, an increase of more than 400,000,000 francs over the returns of the preceding two years combined.

The tax on industrial and commercial profits amounted to 184,000,000 francs, and that on salaries to 59,000,000 francs, while the tax on agricultural profits footed up only 1,500,000 francs.

$2,978,992 TO AID JEWS.

Amount Expended in September for Relief of War Sufferers.

Disbursements amounting to $2,978,992 from funds raised throughout the United States by the American Jewish Relief Committee and other Jewish organizations were made in September alone by the Joint Distribution Committee, according to a report made public yesterday. The money was expended for food, clothing, medicine and other necessaries for the relief of war sufferers in Eastern and Central Europe, Palestine and elsewhere.

The report in part follows:

"The cargo that went to Poland on the second voyage of the Westward Ho cost $508,129.56, and the shipload of kosher beef sent to the same stricken country on the Ashburn cost $286,424.14. Soap sent overseas on the Thala, and consigned to Poland, cost $15,249.60, and $43,153.56 represented the balance of the 29,000 pounds sterling allocated for clothing to be bought in London.

"For general relief in Lithuania $150,000 was expended, and half a million dollars was sent to Paris for distribution at the discretion of the Emergency Relief.

"The cargo of kosher meat and cotton seed oil which was shipped on the Polyhtus for people of the Central Powers cost $287,249.49, while an additional $300,000 went to Paris to aid refugees in Vienna. The Zionist Relief Organization in Russia was sent $320,000 to reimburse that organization for moneys paid out by it.

"The remainder was disbursed as follows:

"For the cargo of food and clothing shipped on the Jacona and consigned to Rumania, $239,786.27; Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society, toward the maintenance of the Refugee House in Yokohama, $5,000 per month in June, July, August and September; $70,000 a month was sent to Palestine for general relief in July, August and September, while an additional $75,000 was sent to Palestine for the relief of Jewish war orphans, and $10,000 a month for the maintenance of the Dreyfus and Straus soup kitchens and health bureau during September and October. Nor were the Jewish refugees in Constantinople forgotten—$4,000 having been sent to help them."

To Improve Housing for Negroes.

MONTCLAIR, N. J., Oct. 12.—The People's Realty and Housing Company of Montclair has filed a certificate of incorporation in the office of the Essex County Clerk. The company, composed of colored residents of Montclair, has an authorized capital stock of $250,000. The main object of the concern is to improve housing conditions among the colored people of Montclair, and with that end in view will purchase and sell land and build houses.

PLAN NEW POLICY FOR OUR SHIPPING

Republican Proposal Would Abolish Wartime Powers and Stop Board's Program.

LOOKS TO REFORM IN LAWS

Calls for the Return of Requisitioned Property and the Sale of Vessels.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.—Republicans are now preparing to press a policy for the upbuilding of the merchant marine and in preparation for a reform in the shipping laws. Representative Greene, Chairman of the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, has introduced a bill in the House to abolish war-time regulations and stop the building of ships under the supervision of the Emergency Shipping Board.

Representative George W. P. Edmonds of Pennsylvania, who has made a study of the shipping program as a member of this committee, in explanation of the bill which the House will act upon soon, said:

"The future policy to be pursued by the Congress in order to keep the merchant marine upon the sea will be facilitated by the bill introduced by Representative W. S. Greene of Massachusetts. This bill provides for the repeal of all the emergency shipping legislation and cancels all the extraordinary powers conferred upon the President for requisitioning ships and other property. It also repeals the power to control ocean freights and charters and eliminates any further extension of the Shipping Board's house building program. The bill arranges for all property acquired under these acts to be transferred to the Shipping Board. While the power conferred upon the President to operate under the emergency shipping legislation has been exercised by the Shipping Board under order of the President, a dual control is evident which this act prevents, thus concentrating all power in the board.

"The act then arranges for the sale of ships, and provides for extended payments up to ten years upon them; it also authorizes the board to accept mortgages and prescribe the terms of the mortgages. It instructs the board to discontinue ship building as far as is consistent with good judgment, and instructs the board to make no further investments in new ships or plants, and further insists that they shall endeavor to withdraw as quickly as possible from all investments made by them and turn the money into the treasury.

"Provision is made for the operation of ships remaining in possession of the board, but of course under the original shipping act operation of regular lines probably will only be engaged in where the natural business is not adequately served by American lines.

"Requisitioned property in which the Government has no financial interest is to be returned to the owners.

"It is expected that this act properly carried out will clear up all the confusion caused by the many different acts passed from time to time as the war progressed, and eventually will result in the Shipping Board returning to its pre-war status and to continue under the original act creating the Shipping Board."

WORLD'S COTTON MEN MEET

Thirty-one Nations Represented at New Orleans Conference.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 12.—New Orleans tonight became the meeting ground for men of all nations speaking all tongues, but united on a subject of common interest — cotton. Delegates from thirty-one nations are here to attend the sessions beginning tomorrow of the World Cotton Conference.

The conference is regarded as the first serious attempt to gather the cotton interests of the world into council. Through a frank interchange of views leaders hope to reach unanimous agreements on methods for benefitting the entire industry.

The movement for such a conference originated at a meeting of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers in Boston in 1917.

The delegates will be divided into classes, and representatives of each class will meet and elect a temporary chairman who will represent them at the general sessions. The classes are growers, ginners, seed crushers and manufacturers of seed products, compressors, cotton merchants, transportation and insurance, banking, governments and economics, spinners and manufacturers, textile merchants, converters, and finishers.

STRIKERS MULTIPLY INJUSTICE CHARGES

SOME WORKERS LAUD MILLS

And Even Favor the Twelve-Hour Day—Official Denies Discharge of Union Men.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Penn., Oct. 12.—The Senate committee investigating the steel strike heard further stories today from strikers and their wives of alleged oppression and brutality by the steel companies, the police and the courts and drew from strikers admissions of their own use of violence and intimidation.

A number of employes of steel plants, who refused to strike, testified that they were well paid and well treated; that the men generally wished to work long hours because of the extra pay, and that the twelve-hour day was not as bad as it sounds, because the twelve hours included from two or three to six hours of rest. It also was testified that only a small proportion of the employes worked twelve hours, the majority putting in a ten-hour day.

The strike leaders continued the presentation of an elaborate case to prove that the police rode roughshod over the strikers and that justice was denied them in the courts. Their testimony was all addressed to issues arising after the strike had started, and they offered no evidence to prove that the steel workers were dissatisfied with the terms of their employment before the strike, or to meet the contention of the steel companies that their unorganized employes are better paid and treated than organized workers doing similar work in other industries, and that the strike sprung, not from grievances, but from the efforts of an army of organizers.

Better Off Here, They Admit.

The unskilled and semi-skilled laborers who testified told of earning wages from the minimum of $4.62 a day for ten hours to $8.30 a day. Foreigners who were presented as witnesses by the strike leaders were unanimous in saying that they were far better off in this country than they had been in their native lands.

Some of the Senators were wrought up over the stories of alleged injustice in the courts of Pittsburgh and in the steel district, arguing that the seeds of bad citizenship were being sown if foreigners got the impression from dishonest administration of the law, that American institutions were organized to abuse the poor and ignorant. After a pretty Lithuanian woman named Mrs. Andrew Banka had said that she had been arrested and roughly handled by a State trooper at Monessen, for using vile language which she asserted she had not uttered, and then fined $50 without being allowed to testify, Senator Walsh said to W. B. Rubin, counsel for the strikers:

"You ought to follow this through all the courts and see that the matter has the widest publicity. We can't have the impression go out that this is the way that the law is administered in this country."

Mr. Rubin said that this case and all similar cases would be fought to a finish by the lawyers for the strikers. Some of the witnesses offered by the strike leaders to prove atrocities toward the strikers by the "Cossacks," as the strikers call the State Police, and unfairness in the mills, damaged their cause to some extent by admitting aggressions on the part of the strikers, or by admitting that dissatisfaction with wages did not exist.

Accuses Donora Superintendent.

George F. Colson, who was two years and a half in the army, was put on the stand as a witness for the strikers, and he accused Superintendent Johnston of the American steel and wire mill at Donora of carrying whisky and revolvers into the mill.

Witnesses introduced by the strikers told of being discharged for belonging to a union before the strike was declared, and W. B. Rubin sought to show that active union men were blacklisted by steel companies.

The first witness for the steel companies was Richard Raymond, born in England, thirty-three years in this country, of which he is a citizen, and an employe of the Carnegie Steel Mill at Vandergrift. He said he was getting $6.62 a day for a twelve-hour day; that he was satisfied with his pay and conditions, and that the strike had not been preceded by complaints on the part of the men as to pay, hours, or conditions. He said that he had earned 17 cents an hour when he came to the plant thirty-three years ago, and had on his pay brought up a family of nine children, and bought his house out of his savings.

Raymond said that only a few men worked twelve hours a day.

James Lloyd, an employe of the plant of the American Sheet and Tinplate Company at McKeesport, said he was satisfied with $6.62 for a ten-hour day.

C. A. Lighthill, employed at the McCutcheon mill at Allegheny, said that none of the 1,200 men there had joined the strike. He said that he was satisfied with $4.62 a day for ten hours, and that all the men at that plant were perfectly satisfied with it.

Lighthill said that President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor had been greatly misinformed when he said that men injured in the steel mills were badly treated and kept incommunicado by the company. They got the best possible care and were able to see their friends and relatives daily, he declared.

August Mann, the Superintendent of the American Steel and Wire Mill at Donora, said that 4,100 of the 4,300 employes of the company had failed to show up for work on the first day of the strike, but that 1,100 were back at work, and that hundreds more would be there if not kept out by intimidation.

He was called particularly to controvert the story of Michael O'Reilly, the $10-a-day man, who said that he struck for shorter hours and for an opportunity to get a better hearing for grievances. He told the committee that he had been abused by a foreman and had been denied justice by Superintendent Mann. Mann insisted that he had given the fullest hearing to O'Reilly's complaint, and had personally watched the department for weeks to see whether there was any foundation for the story that O'Reilly had been abused.

Mann said that the company never discharged men because they belonged to a union and never discharged them even for agitating. He was asked if any had been discharged for un-American utterances during the war, and he said that he had fired those who failed to buy Liberty bonds, but had reinstated them when they made purchases.

Woman Tells of Arrest.

Mrs. Annia Kachmarik said she had been arrested at Monessen by several negroes, some employes of the steel plant, and some Deputy Sheriffs, who had taken her in charge after some one had shouted "Scab!" She denied that she had applied this epithet.

Rudolph Dressler, a hotel keeper at Homestead, was called to identify a picture in the photographic section of a New York paper showing State troops scattering a crowd at Homestead. He said he was attacked and arrested, though he was standing in front of the door of his hotel doing nothing, and with no one with him. Senator Sterling pointed out, however, that the picture showed that he was one of quite a mob.

T. L. Beaghan, Vice President of the Central Labor Union, testified as to the refusal of the local authorities to allow meetings except at the Labor Temple and one other hall.

"Well, don't you think the police are likely to get arbitrary when they are defied?" asked Senator McKellar. The labor leader admitted that there was something in that.

Joe Kastinich, a witness for the strikers, said that he had been fired five weeks ago by the National Tube Company for joining the union. He said that he had been getting $8.45 a day, and would readily go back to work, if he could get his job back, so that he could support his three children.

The committee held afternoon and night sessions and left at midnight for Washington.

Foster Tells Johnstown Steel Strikers Acceptance of Arbitration Means Victory.

JOHNSTOWN, Penn., Act. 12.—William Z. Foster, secretary of the Steel Strike Committee, in addressing two large meetings of Johnstown strikers today, based much of his hope of victory on the outcome of the Industrial Conference at Washington, stating that all of the labor group, all of the public group and some members of the employers' group wanted arbitration, and that the offer of Samuel Gompers to arbitrate must be accepted or the conference would be a complete failure.

Foster declared defeat of the American Federation of Labor now would mean that in a few years a new organization, the I. W. W. or something else, would renew the fight, while peace now and for the future might be possible by recognition of the right of collective bargaining and arbitration of all other disputes.

The third week of the strike here begins with the plants of the Cambria Steel Company still completely shut down in accordance with the policy that work will be resumed when a sufficient number of men return to operate profitably.

ALTOONA MEN TO END STRIKE.

Pennsylvania Workers Yield to Leaders' Advice.

ALTOONA, Pa., Oct. 12.—After a protracted meeting tonight of the striking Pennsylvania railroad shopmen during which leaders and organizers who came here for the purpose, pleaded with the men to go back to work tomorrow in a body, with the assurance that their grievances would be later adjusted by the National Administrator of Railroads, it was decided that the strike should end at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon when the men should return to the shops on their regular shifts.

H. J. Carr, a labor representative, sent here from Washington, told the men that the strike was contrary to the national agreement and was brought about in an illegal manner.

SOFT COAL STRIKE MAY BE AVERTED

Miners and Operators Willing to Confer Again—Third Interest Seeking Settlement.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 12.—Although the conference between bituminous coal operators and miners, which was held here last week, ended in a deadlock and it was announced that a general strike would be called for Nov. 1, there were indications today that the difficulties might yet be adjusted. Both sides officially declared their willingness to meet again, and it was strongly indicated that a third interest, more than likely officials in Washington, would bring the two together.

John L. Lewis, Acting President of the United Mine Workers, started for Indianapolis tonight. Before going he announced that he would issue the strike call by telegraph on Tuesday. No strike vote will be necessary, owing to the action of the recent convention in Cleveland.

Thomas F. Brewster of Illinois, president of the conference, representing the operators, before leaving the city today declared that the operators were willing to meet with the miners at any time on a basis of a modification of the demands.

It was made clear that the issuance of the strike call would not affect the situation during the next two weeks. The spokesman of the miners pointed out that instructions would be sent out to maintain the maximum of output for that period.

Strike Ties Up Middletown Cars.

Special to The New York Times.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., Oct. 12.—All street car lines in this city and between here and Goshen have been paralyzed today by a strike of the motormen, conductors and power house employes of the Wallkill Transit Company. The strike is due to the decision of the company to start the running of one-man cars on the city lines.

LAYS RIOTS TO COTTON ROW.

Colored Association Denies Any Real Uprising of Arkansas Negroes.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, 70 Fifth Avenue, New York, yesterday made public a letter from a correspondent near the scene of the race riots in Arkansas, showing that cotton prices, and not negro insurrection, was the cause of the trouble. The correspondent, whose standing the association vouches for, writes:

"The whole trouble, as I understand it, started because a Mr. Bratton, a white lawyer from Little Rock, Ark., was employed by sixty or seventy colored families to go to Elaine to represent them in a dispute with the white planters relative to the sale price of cotton. A full statement by Mr. Bratton appears in some of the clippings I have sent.

"The clipping referred to is from the Memphis (Tenn.) Commercial Appeal of Friday morning, Oct. 3. According to U. S. Bratton, father of the attorney accused of 'inciting' the negroes, therein quoted, his clients 'claimed that it had been impossible for them to obtain itemized statements of accounts, or in fact to obtain statements at all, and that the manager was preparing to ship their cotton, they being share croppers and having a half interest therein, off without settling with them or allowing them to sell their half of the crop and pay up their accounts. * * * As we were informed, there were some sixty-five or seventy of these share croppers who desired us to represent them. If it's a crime to represent people in an effort to make honest settlements, then he has committed a crime."

ISSUES RED CROSS APPEAL.

Governor Smith Proclaims Week of Nov. 2 for Rollcall.

The following proclamation urging the people of New York State to respond to the appeal of the American Red Cross in the third roll call for members was issued yesterday by Governor Alfred E. Smith:

"The American Red Cross, by its unfailing and generous assistance, has won the esteem and confidence of the men of the American Expeditionary Force, as well as the hearty commendation and approval of the soldiers and sailors in the various camps and stations throughout our land; and,

"Whereas, the work of this organization is permanent in nature and universal in its scope, meeting alike the requirements of war and the demands of peace; and

"Whereas, a continuation of its great work requires large sums of money and the moral support of the public;

"Now, therefore, I, Alfred E. Smith, Governor of the State of New York, do hereby proclaim the week beginning Nov. 2, 1919, Red Cross Week, and call upon the people of this State to give their generous assistance to the work by promptly responding to the third Red Cross roll call."

MATERIAL MEN SET FOR ACTIVE WINTER

LABOR DEADLOCK ENDING

Contractors Find Their Next Problem Will Be to Get Building Supplies.

With the clearing of the deadlock between the building artisan and his employer, the greater problem of finding available material with which to carry on new construction work during the coming Winter and early Spring is already beginning to absorb the attention of architects and contractors.

Building material manufacturers aver that the shortened standard of a day's work at the mills and kilns has alyeady precluded any possibility that normally would have existed to accumulate a surplus supply for immediate future market needs. This is said to be true of nearly every department in the building material field. It simply means that hope must be abandoned for quick relief from the housing shortage. It also means that the upward tendency of the price of all building materials will be accentuated. Continued scarcity of new buildings will tend to increase rents still further next year.

As the situation now stands, the general construction market is headed toward commercial and industrial development, rather than toward residential building. More and more the holders of building materials, whether manufacturers or distributers are being forced to cater to the large buyer.

The foregoing applies to the East perhaps more than to the West or Middle West. Projected building work outside of the environs of New York is extremely active and the condition of supply is not so lamentably low as it is in this vicinity. Nevertheless, the trend of prices is upward in almost every part of the country, for the most part reflecting the higher cost of the shortened working day and the nation-wide demand for new construction work.

Price activity was more pronounced in the supplementals department last week. In every department reporting there is a monotonous flavor of inability to catch up with orders, sharp declines in volume of production and the constant hitching up of prices of raw materials. This complaint is common also among basic building material manufacturers, but there is more stability to price levels in basic materials than in the list of supplementals.

There are variations here and there. Tubular goods, for instance, reports a large volume of new business waiting to be placed, but few buyers are approaching the mills because of existing conditions. Shipping schedules are much upset, and while deliveries were bad month before they are much worse at present and before long it is feared a shortage will be reported, especially in the oil fields.

Some of the mills have been able to continue operation, but the greater number has lost production due to labor troubles. It does not now seem probable that mills will be interested in new business for some time.

Porcelains probably lead the list in price advances, same running from 20 to 40 per cent. over former lists, in the electrical department. In the general wire products department production is being curtailed because of labor conditions which, however, seem to be clearing. Specifications against contracts have been heavy and practically all makers are booked up for the remainder of the year.

The loss of production in this department is being felt by jobbers and their stocks have been seriously drained, while replenishments slow. Premium prices are being paid in order to get deliveries as high as $4.25 base having been reported as paid for carload shipment out of stock.

In the plumbing trade the Fall meeting of the Eastern Association held here developed the opinion that present levels were not in many cases entirely warranted and that heavy demand had been taken advantage of by manufacturers in some instances.

The general building situation in New York and vicinity is preparing for an active Winter, says The Dow Service Daily Building Reports. While the matters in issue between the employers and employes are being ironed out, general preparations are under way for a big construction movement. Brick manufacturers have been taking advantage of the recent warm weather to operate their yards as near to capacity as the condition of labor supply will permit, while the contractors are coming to a realization that their next big problem after the labor situation clears will be to get supplies sufficient to meet their needs.

The realization of this situation is responsible for the heavy pressure now being exerted by prospective builders of important commercial and industrial projects to book up material supply well into the future at the best price they can get under the circumstances.

TRADE DELEGATIONS HERE FROM EUROPE

Missions from Allied Countries Arrive to Attend Atlantic City Conference.

WILL TOUR THE COUNTRY

Thirty-six Delegates Come as the Guests of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

The foreign delegation to the International Trade Conference, to be held at Atlantic City, from France, Great Britain, Italy, and Belgium arrived yesterday on the U. S. Army transport Northern Pacific and were taken to the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria, where they will remain until Thursday morning. The delegation will spend six weeks in the United States as the guests of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, making an extensive tour of the principal cities of the country after the conference at Atlantic City is closed.

The purpose of the visit of the foreign delegation to this country is a discussion of the re-establishment of normal trade relations between the United States and Europe. It will include such subjects as the rehabilitation of European industries, the correction of exchange rates, the advancement of commercial credits, and the creation of an international organization of business and trade associations.

The conference at Atlantic City, which has been arranged by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, will be attended by more than 4,000 American business leaders representing all branches of industry. There are thirty-six delegates in the party and eleven secretaries. Six delegates came from Great Britain, sixteen from France, seven from Italy and seven from Belgium.

The French delegation includes Eugene Schneider, head of the Creusot Iron Works; Baron du Marais, Vice President of the Crédit Lyonnais of Paris; Pellerin de la Touche, President of the French Line; Albert Tirman, representative of the French Government, with the mission; André Homberg, Vice President of the Société Générale de France; Frederic Arthur Waddington, mill owner and weaver of Rouen; Julin Potin, President of Potin et Cie of Paris; Jean Jules Godet, member of the Chamber of Commerce of Paris, and Pesson Didion, engineer of mines and director of the Central Society for Electrical Industry.

The British mission includes A. Barton Kent, head of the brush business established by his great grandfather 142 years ago, who has been Chairman of the Entente Cordiale since 1902; John Creeley Jenkins, former Premier of Australia, and Marshall Stevens, M. P., one of the founders of the Manchester Ship Canal Corporation.

Among the Italian delegates were Commendators Professor Bernardo D. Attolico, Director General of Commerce, Ministry of Commerce, who was Commissioner of Emigration to the United States in 1907 and Director of Economic Bureaus of the League of Nations in 1919; Dr. Luigi Luzzi, Inspector General of Italian Royal Civil Engineers, and Fernando Quartieri, President of the Italian Chemical Industries.

Some of the Belgian representatives in the delegation were Florimond Hankar, Director of the National Bank of Belgium and other large financial and industrial institutions, and Prof. Paul J. J. van den Ven, Ph. D., of the University of Louvain, a member of the Belgian peace delegation to Paris and a member of the faculty of Princeton University from 1915 to 1918.

Eugène Schneider, the Chairman of the French mission, on behalf of the other delegates from the four allied countries expressed his gratitude to the Chamber of Commerce, which took the happy initiative of asking the representatives of the economic activity of the allied countries to take part in a conference to discuss adequate means of restoring the economic life of the world."

DIFFER ON PIER PLANS.

Merchants Disapprove Proposals of Terminal Engineers.

The Merchants' Association yesterday took issue with the Society of Terminal Engineers regarding the equipment of new piers by the city. It has approved a report made by the Committee on Harbor, Docks, and Terminals, of which H. B. Walker is Chairman. In a statement the association said:

"Resolutions adopted by the Society of Terminal Engineers declare that in the design of the new piers projected for Staten Island provision should be made for loading rails on the piers, and that contracts for equipping piers should contemplate that type of construction which is best adapted to the installation of modern cargo handling devices and machinery.

"The cargoes reaching this city are extremely diverse in character. The packages vary widely in size and weight and are usually not adapted to mechanical handling, which is suitable principally to packages of standard size or cargoes of a uniform character.

"Most of the cargoes reaching New York are not suitable for direct rail reshipment, but must be warehoused, rehandled, and reassembled before reshipment. Few of the steamship companies find that lines of rails upon their piers present any advantage, but, on the contrary, are usually a direct obstruction.

"The committee, therefore, does not concur in the propositions that in the construction of new piers they should be of such type as to provide either for rails or for mechanical handling, for the reason that if such general policy were adopted it would require piers of heavier structure than at present, involve a material increase in the costs, and substantially interfere with tidal currents. It is the opinion of the committee that the city, in advance of the construction of piers, should make leases therefor whenever possible, and should construct piers fitted with such mechanical appliances for handling as may be desired by the lessees."

When I was recently advertising the Claflin Estate only a short distance up in the Bronx, my friendly rival

Hunts Point is the most densely populated part of the East Side of the Bronx

J. Clarence Davies, published this statement in the newspapers

"The East Side of the Bronx has always built up first and become densely populated, while the west side is still sparsely settled."

PUBLIC NOTICE!

For the past four weeks we have been advertising

Buy A Lot On Broadway

We have been earnestly advising this because we know from thirty years' experience that this is the kind of property the public can invest in with safety and profit, as well as for the following reasons:

1. BROADWAY IS a completely finished street, for which all assessments have been paid.
2. BROADWAY IS the main artery of New York and the first principle of real estate investment is to buy on main thoroughfares.
3. BROADWAY IS the greatest street in the world. If you have a lot on Broadway everybody knows where it is. If you desire to resell you will never have any trouble selling on Broadway.
4. IN FIFTEEN years Broadway, built up almost solidly from 110th to 181st street. To-day a large theatre is building at 181st street and Broadway. With the city five years underbuilt during the next fifteen years Broadway should be solidly built up to the city line.
5. LOTS HAVE been selling much below their value owing to the war. Every commodity has gone up 75% to 300% in value except lots. It is inevitable that lots should rise in value also. In the four years following the Civil War lots rose 100% to 300%. The same thing should happen in the next four or five years.
6. THE BEST lots are always the cheapest in the end. It can hardly be denied that lots on Broadway, opposite Van Cortlandt Park, are the best.
7. LOTS HERE are especially suited for living purposes. With Van Cortlandt Park opposite your house for the children; for you, there is baseball, football, skating, tennis or golf and every form of outdoor amusement.
8. BROADWAY VALUES have steadily increased as the city grew. Broadway must do the same here.
9. BROADWAY HERE has a monopoly of business. Under the City restrictions, Broadway is the only street on which business is allowed. Lots here are suitable for living purposes, and business as well, and for this reason it is impossible to tell how valuable these lots may become.
10. BROADWAY LOTS at a junction, at transfer points, or at the entrance to Parks are to-day the most valuable in the city. The same conditions exist on the Van Cortlandt property at 242d street to 246th street.
11. THESE LOTS opposite Van Cortlandt Park are the most desirable to-day for building purposes and should be the first in demand, and among the first to feel the rise in value.
12. A LARGE part of the public are investing in wildcat speculations. Lots on Broadway, opposite Van Cortlandt Park, near a subway station, are a safe and sure investment, to say nothing of the opportunity they offer for a large speculative profit within the next few years. A Broadway lot is an anchor to windward in case other investments go wrong.
13. MANY OF the Broadway lots around 242d street pay good rentals (as high as $1500 net per annum) and are a good investment to-day; if stores were built on others, they could be readily leased for a restaurant, a bakery, a confectionery, a sporting goods store, or other stores of a similar nature to supply the demands of the constant flow of transient traffic and local needs.
14. A FEW thousand dollars invested here should undoubtedly lead to a good income in a few years, as the district grows and develops. This has occurred at traffic centres on Broadway and the Bronx; the same thing will undoubtedly occur here.
15. THIS BROADWAY front, opposite the Park, north of 246th street, should be used for residential purposes and apartment houses, and then developed into business property, the same as all business streets opposite Parks in the city.
16. FOR INVESTORS—Builders—Speculators—Operators—Home Builders—Storekeepers—

It is the most historic and remarkable opportunity to obtain real, good property at first hand. This is the first time this property has ever been sold.

IN CONCLUSION—The terms are very easy. 75% of the purchase money can remain on mortgage for 5 years at 5%.

To-day is a holiday. We urge and advise you to examine the property. Pick out the lots you would like best, suitable for your purposes, go to the auction sale and see whether you cannot get them for the price you are willing to pay. This is our earnest advice to our friends and clients.

Remember, there never has been there never can be again

GIRLS AND WOMEN.
PLEASANT, PERMANENT POSITIONS WITH HIGH PAY.

The National Cloak and Suit Company is a big retail mail order house—not a factory.

We occupy the big modern 16-story building on 7th Av., between 26th and 25th Sts., convenient to 28d St. Station of the 7th Av. Subway, 6th Av. and 9th Av. Elevated, and 23d St. Crosstown line.

We aim to make the National one of the best places in the city for girls and women to work; we pay the best wages and offer the opportunity for quick advancement; besides, we pay a cash bonus every three months that increases your earnings rapidly.

In return we want only intelligent, earnest girls and women, who really want to get along and make more money.

At present we have open a number of positions that do not require experience, but that do give bright girls a chance to advance quickly.

TYPISTS,
FILE CLERKS,
MAIL OPENERS,
GENERAL OFFICE WORK.

Mothers and Fathers are urged to visit the National and see the working conditions here. Every department is clean and bright, well lighted and well ventilated. We have a splendid luncheroom where good lunches are served at cost, and besides have rest rooms, library, and everything that will add to the employees' comfort.

Reaching the Worlds Greatest Market thru The Capper Farm Press

The World's Greatest Market lies in the 16 states of the Middle West, which make up the natural and logical territory covered by The Capper Farm Press.

These 16 states produce in crops and livestock, more than half of our total agricultural wealth. The annual farm products of these 16 states alone are worth TWELVE BILLION DOLLARS, while the total for the other 32 states is Eleven Billion Dollars.

The average value per farm in these 16 states is $10,247 compared with a general average of $6,444 for the entire United States.

Naturally then, these states, with their nearly three million prosperous farms, offer a wonderfully rich market for manufactured goods. A study of sales records shows that for most kinds of merchandise they offer greater marketing possibilities than all the rest of the country combined. The farmers of these states buy more motor cars, more tractors, more farm machinery, than do the other thirty-two states. In fact they buy more of everything else that goes to make life worth living.

And they are buying more liberally every year.

This is the World's Greatest Market in Immediate Buying Power

THE 16 CAPPER STATES
Kansas	Iowa	Minnesota	Arkansas
Nebraska	Illinois	Wisconsin	Colorado
Missouri	Indiana	South Dakota	Wyoming
Oklahoma	Texas	North Dakota	New Mexico

QUALITY FARMERS—These 16 states have 72.5% of all pure-bred registered livestock in the U. S.

GREAT MARKETS—In the Heart of the Grain and Livestock belt, with the most completely equipped marketing facilities in the world

MOTOR CARS—One motor car to every 12.9 persons in the 16 Capper States; while in the rest of the United States there is one car to every 19.9 persons.

BUSINESS BY TELEPHONE—64% of the farmers in these 16 states have telephones as compared with 32% of the farmers in the 32 other states.

VALUE OF ALL FARM PROPERTY—In the 16 Capper States at the Census of 1910 was over NINE BILLION DOLLARS MORE than that of all the other 32 states combined.

The Capper Farm Press Idea

The Capper Farm Press is the one medium that specializes in this rich territory. With its more than a million circulation it reaches more than one farm family in every three.

The Capper Farm Press not only gives you a larger circulation in this great market than does any other medium, but it is undoubtedly closer to its subscribers than it could possibly be if it endeavored to cover the entire United States.

The service of The Capper Farm Press differs from that offered by other agricultural papers of general circulation in that it recognizes the infinite variety of agriculture and knows that in farm work a method that may be ideal in one section of the country is all wrong in another.

So instead of attempting to serve the farmers of these 16 states—or the entire country—with glittering generalities and entertaining miscellany, The Capper Farm Press is divided into five distinct sections with five distinct editorial staffs, the members of which live among and work with the people they serve, going to their meetings, co-operating with their county agents and even doing actual work on farms of their own. When these men and women write they may truthfully say "All of this I saw; part of this I was." They are "home folks," called by their first names, in more than a million farm homes.

Hence they are in position to treat the local, technical problems of the farmers in different sections of the territory, as well as to deal with the many broad business, economic, political and social problems of farm life. The result is a distinctive group of very different farm publications with an unusual appeal to thinking, successful farmers.

These 16 states are producing, or can be made to produce, the lion's share of your business. You can adequately cover them, most economically, most effectively thru The Capper Farm Press.

Co-Operative Service That Creates Dealer Interest

The Capper Farm Press is of big service to any advertiser, not only in telling his message to the farmer, but in actually assisting him in his merchandising campaigns.

Intimate knowledge of the territory—constant research work—help in routing salesmen—DEFINITE MERCHANDISING PLANS—these and many other kinds of service are offered to the advertiser in The Capper Farm Press. Many leading advertisers avail themselves of this help.

We are prepared to co-operate with you in securing dealers and adequate distribution of your goods. And the plan works in such a way that you see RESULTS before a campaign is fairly under way.

Our Research Bureau will furnish surveys, maps and analyses to any advertiser or advertising agent. Put your farm market problems up to us.
